WASHINGTON NEWS.

The Senate and the Sumner Preamble—Naval Appropriations Voted—The Alabama Claims—Miscellaneous.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 15.—The failure of Senator SUMNER yesterday to sustain the allegations made in the long preamble to his resolution was not accompanied by any failure of falsification and misrepresentation in the opposition Press. The Tribune says that when his resolution was first brought forward its consideration was prevented by the "President's partisans," as it terms them, in the Senate. This is wholly untrue. Mr. SUMNER himself said he did not want immediate consideration when he introduced the resolution, and when he first asked to have it taken up he found his call sustained by all of those called by the Tribune the "President's partisans," except such as happened to be on the Appropriation Committee, who followed, generally, the lead of their chairman in trying to first secure the passage of the Appropriation bill. This statement was more vicious but less stupid than the other one in the same article which said that the resolution passed the Senate yesterday without opposition. The failure of the attack upon the Administration today was a continuation of the disaster which it met yesterday. Mr. HARLAN more than met expectations which were entertained of him, and Mr. SUMNER sat through most of his reply to his own statements of yesterday, with his head on his hand, looking gloomy and disheartened. Occasionally he leaned forward to suggest evidently a defense to be made for him by Mr. SCHURZ. That gentleman himself displayed more nervousness than he was ever observed to exhibit before on a similar occasion, and when Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN had concluded his arraignment of Mr. SUMNER'S unpatriotic course in seeking to make out a case for the German Empire to make demands upon us for indemnity and damages when it had never discovered anything but impartiality in our Government's execution of its obligations as a neutral, it was clear that only a most extraordinary effort, and the production of new facts by Mr. SCHURZ, could turn the tide of the conspirators' defeat. He was not equal to the emergency. Their ammunition had all incautiously been rammed into the preamble of the resolution and fired off. There were no new facts, and no new arguments to be based upon the old ones. Of course there could be but one result. Mr. HARLAN began the discussion today. In the first place, he showed that the charge that our Government had violated the international code for neutrals was groundless unless it was proved that our arms had been sold to known agents of France, which he refuted. We had a right to sell to our own citizens, and there was nothing in the law to preclude the selling of arms either to France or Germany by our citizens, they taking, of course, the risks of seizure. No one disputes that these positions are properly taken; but Messrs. SUMNER and SCHURZ insist that our Government should have investigated every bid to see that the arms bought should not find their way even indirectly into the hands of belligerents. On the charges of fraud based upon the alleged discrepancies in returns of accounts by the War and Treasury Departments, he brought in the original record of the Ordnance Bureau, and showed by it that every dollar of the receipts were accounted for, and sustained the statements made on this head yesterday by Mr. WILSON. He proved that even the statements of the Treasury report had been misquoted to give color to the charges. He then proceeded to show that Mr. SUMNER'S documents quoted in the preamble were furnished him by a French agent, and made and sustained the charge that there had been dealings with officers of a foreign Government by a Senator to secure material for an attack upon his own. Three papers which he quoted could only have found their way into Mr. SUMNER'S hands through the French Legation, and one of them in grave violation of diplomatic privilege. Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN spoke briefly, but with a very telling effect, especially upon Mr. SUMNER himself, who keenly felt the force of the results which might flow from his unpatriotic conduct. Mr. SCHURZ began with a nervous extempore fusilade, and for the first twenty minutes he seemed almost wholly abandoned by his usual self-possession. At the end of that time he reached the beginning of his prepared speech, to which he adhered pretty closely to the end. It would have been effective but for the fact that it had been prepared before the debate began, and the discussion had since exploded his facts. He admitted that there was no ground for any charges on the Department statements of accounts, which had been or could be fully explained, he had no doubt. He finally reduced his reasons for wanting an investigation to two. One was that the accounts of the French Government for arms bought by it during their war did not agree with the accounts of our Government for sales during the same period. The second reason was that the German-born American citizens would be terribly excited if an investigation was refused, what never happened before. Mr. SCHURZ failed to hold the galleries, which were well thinned out before the close of his speech. In repartee, for which he is so famous, he signally failed, being, as SUMNER'S friends said of him yesterday, not able to reply promptly to questions which were put to him. He succeeded in showing the malice which actuated him by insinuating in the close of his speech that the Secretary of War had been overruled by the President in the matter of sales of arms, and that the President had, in turn, been controlled by some military ring which was organized for purposes of plunder. As the case stands now, unless CHAMBRUN furnishes the delectable duett with more evidence, they can do nothing, and they are now at the mercy of EDMUNDS, MORTON and CONKLING, without the power of defense. If they enter the debate again it can only be to make a bitter personal contest. Mr. TRUMBULL and even TIPTON will not aid them, and the Democrats thus far decline the attempt to come to their rescue.

SENATOR BROWNLOW ON BECK.

Mr. BROWNLOW obtained permission today for the reading of his reply to the aspersions of Mr. BECK in the House upon his character. Mr. BECK was severely and deservedly handled in the loyal Parson's inimitable manner. His allusions and language, in view of the fact that Mr. BECK is a member of the House, were unparliamentary and improper, and would not have been permitted under the rules from any other Senator. Everybody recognized the cowardice of the attack which BECK had made upon a Senator who could not even speak, or hold a pen in his own defense; so unanimous consent was given to the reading of the statement written for him from his whispered dictation.

THE NAVAL APPROPRIATION.

The House today finished the Naval Appropriation bill, a result which has seldom been reached in so short a time. The bill is passed substantially as it came from the Committee. The Army bill will next be considered.

COMMERCE WITH BRAZIL.

The Ways and Means Committee today appointed Messrs. ROBERTS, FINKELNBURG and BROOKS a special committee to consider and report upon Mr. COX'S bill to promote trade with Brazil. This bill provides that the monthly mail service with that country shall be increased to semi-monthly, and that the additional service shall be performed in American steamers of not less than 2,000 tons burden.

FIRE-PROOF COMPOSITION.

An important trial of fire-proof composition has been made at the Navy-yard by direction of the Secretary of the Navy and the Secretary of the Treasury, under supervision of A. B. MULLETT, Esq., Supervising Architect of the Treasury. Two trials were made, one in the reberveratory furnace and one in the blast furnace. Both were eminently successful. The last resulted as follows: An iron chest, 16 inches in diameter, with a lining of 6 inches of the composition, also containing a wooden box, 4 inches in diameter, in which were deposited papers, money, and matches was placed in the blast furnace, and different metals placed all around it, after being subjected to an almost continuous blast of three hours; and after all the metals were melted, the chest was left in the furnace until this morning. Today at 1 o'clock P. M., under direction of the representatives of the Government, the three chests were opened and the contents were found to be in exactly the same condition as when they were put in, and the matches were used to light cigars with. The fire-proof composition is the discovery of two gentlemen from Detroit, one of whom, SIGISMUND ROTHSCHILD, was present at the trial.

VISITORS.

Hon. W. B. ALLISON, Senator elect from Iowa, arrived in the city this morning, and during the day called upon the President, with whom he had a very agreeable interview. Hon. JAMES F. WILSON and Gen. G. M. DODGE, of Iowa, are also here. GEO. C. MCKEE, Esq., of the St. Louis Democrat, is also in the City, and called upon the President today.

THE ALABAMA CLAIMS.

The text of Earl GRANVILLE'S letter to this Government will not reach here before Monday or Tuesday next, as it did not leave London until the 6th inst. Of course no reply will be framed until that is received.

JOHNSON, THE EMBEZZLER.

There is a law which provides that a witness examined before a committee of Congress shall not be proceeded against in the Courts touching any matter upon which he gave evidence. Under the operation of this law, SETH JOHNSON, whose embezzlement of about $40,000 was discovered recently in the Treasurer's Office, was today discharged from custody, and the crime, to which, a few days ago, he was ready to plead guilty, must go unpunished. It seems that Mr. LYNCH'S Committee, which is making an investigation into the expenditures of the Treasury, not having in mind the effect, and perhaps not the existence of the law, were induced to summon JOHNSON, who gave full testimony concerning his operation, and then pleaded the statute and escaped. The law was imperative, and the Committee's action saved him from the penitentiary.

JUDGE WRIGHT.

Judge WRIGHT, under arrest for frauds on the Interior Department and the Indians, has been trying to induce the Committee on Indian Affairs to summon him to testify before it, but the vigilant officers of the Department prevented the fulfillment of his wishes. The little game will not soon succeed after the example of JOHNSON.

CONFIRMATIONS.

The Senate in Executive Session, today, confirmed the nomination of GRATIOT WASHBURNE, son of Minister WASHBURNE, as Assistant Secretary of the Legation to France; and also that of SAMUEL C. WINGARD as United States Attorney for Washington Territory.

EX-CONGRESSMAN STOKES' CASE.

Yesterday the counsel of WILLIAM B. STOKES, convicted of receiving pay while member of Congress for prosecuting claims, &c., moved an arrest of judgment on the ground that the indictment charged no offense, was vague, indefinite, and defective, and that these faults could not be cured by a verdict. The Court this morning overruled the motion. Judge CARTER deferred sentence, and orders the case for hearing before the General Term. VICTOR G. POWELL was sentenced to pay a fine of $500. SETH JOHNSON'S plea that he could not be tried because he had been before a Congressional Committee on the same charges was sustained, and the prosecutors proposing no new action in the case he was released.

THE PRESIDENT'S LEVEE.

The President's last levee of the season was held this evening, and the attendance was even larger than heretofore during the Winter, comprising the usual assemblage of members of the Cabinet, Supreme Court Judges, army and navy officers, Senators and Representatives in Congress, diplomats, and representatives of the great American public generally. Among those present were Senator TRUMBULL and Gen. PHIL. SHERIDAN. Mrs. GRANT assisted the President in receiving, together with Mrs. COLFAX and Mrs. Marshal SHARP.

A NOTABLE MARRIAGE.

At an early hour the only daughter of Justice SWAYNE, of the Supreme Court, and Mr. EDWIN PARSENS, of New-York City, were married, at the residence of the bride's father, in the presence of a small but very distinguished company, including the President, Vice-President, several members of the Cabinet, all the Justices of the Supreme Court, and a number of ladies and gentlemen occupying positions of the highest social and official prominence. The newly-married couple leave to-night for New-York, and thence on Saturday for Europe.

NEW-ORLEANS INVESTIGATION.

What the Testimony Proves—The Charges of Interference Against the President Disproved—How the Negroes Will Vote.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 15.—The Special Committee to investigate the New-Orleans troubles returned to this city this morning. The evidence taken in the examination is very voluminous and has not yet been arranged or written out. It will, therefore, be from two to four weeks before the Committee will be able to prepare and present their report. On some minor points there may be differences in the minds of the majority members, but the evidence obtained, to the satisfaction of all, unqualifiedly exculpates the Administration from the charge so freely made, that it had taken sides in the factional contest in Louisiana, and that the United States officials there were acting under instructions to this effect. The single fact, abundantly proven, that some of these officials took sides with one faction, and some with the other, is enough to overthrow this charge. The Committee is of opinion that the legality of the sitting of that wing which expelled CARTER and his associates cannot be sustained, the evidence showing that a quorum of the duly elected members of the Legislature did not remain after the secession of CARTER'S clique. This quorum was only finally obtained by the return, one by one, of quite a number of the seceders. It is doubtful if the report of the Committee will contain any recommendations regarding the State officers, or endeavor to judge as to the right and the wrong which may reside in the case of either faction of the Republican Party there. They do not anticipate that there will be any further trouble in the Legislature, but it is probable that the breach will continue to exist until it can be settled by another election. There will be a minority report from the two Democrats on the Committee. It is not probable, however, that they will attempt to make any point against the United States officials or the Administration. It will simply be the usual Democratic outcry against reconstruction. They will be obliged, however, to deal with the disagreeable fact, abundantly sustained by the evidence, that however much corruption may exist in Louisiana, the Democrats are as deeply steeped in it as the Republicans. The Committee say that on one subject there is no division, and that is, that notwithstanding Mr. SUMNER'S leadership, the colored men are unanimous for President GRANT.

THE ERIE RING.

Five Years' Robbery and a Long List of Lawless Acts.

Fifty Millions Charged to a Closed Account—"What Have they Done With It?"—How Capital Increases and Dividends Decrease.

ALBANY, Feb. 15.—At a meeting of the Judiciary Committee of the Senate this afternoon, Senator O'BRIEN'S bill repealing the Erie Railway Directors' Classification act, and providing for a new election of directors, came up. Messrs. HALE, PECKHAM and MCFARLAND appeared in behalf of the passage of the bill, and Mr. SHEARMAN in opposition. After hearing Mr. HALE, the Committee adjourned further consideration of the subject to the 27th inst. The following are some of the statements made by Mr. HALE respecting the affairs of the road: 1867—stock, $25,111,210; funded debt, $22,429,920; total, $47,541,130. 1871—stock, $66,536,910; funded debt, $26,398,800; total, $112,935,710. Increase in the amount of stock and funded debt since 1867, when GOULD and FISK came in—in stock, $41,425,700; in funded debt, $3,968,880; total increase since 1867, $65,394,580. The above sum has never been accounted for by the directors, except by an evidently and conceded false entry in their reports. The construction account of the old New-York and Erie Railroad Company was closed some ten years ago, when the present Erie Railway Company was created; and the only way that the directors of the Erie Railway Company have attempted to account for the vast sum above mentioned, has been by the gross and glaring fraud of adding nearly $50,000,000 in their annual reports to the old "construction account" of the New-York and Erie Railroad Company. In the annual report of 1867, the amount charged to the New-York and Erie Railroad was $38,964,728 45. In the report of 1871, sworn to by JAY GOULD and L. D. RUCKER, the amount of this account is stated at $86,026,360 76, thus showing an apparent increase, since 1867, in an account which could by no possibility have been really increased a single dollar, of $47,061,632 33, and the only excuse for this evidently false entry and gross fraud made by Mr. SHEARMAN in his remarks before the Railroad Committee of the Assembly, on Wednesday, was that the printed blanks furnished by the State Engineers contained no room for the entry of the real truth. These blanks, however, do contain places for the statement of the cost of the road and equipment, including gradation, masonry, superstructure, passenger and freight stations, engine and car houses, passenger and freight cars, locomotives and fixtures, all of which are filled up and credited to the directors at large figures, but nowhere, except in the false entry above mentioned, is there any accounting for the $47,000,000 there conceded, or for the $65,000,000, the actual amount of the increase of stock and debt. Besides this, the income accounts drawn from the annual reports show that this $65,000,000, added to the stock and debts, yield no return whatever under the present management, according to what they claimed to be true accounts. In 1867 the capital was $25,111,210. This yielded a net surplus for the shareholders of $1,048,900, or a little more than four per cent. on the capital. In 1871, with a capital of $86,536,910, their net surplus income is stated at $118,265, or thirteen-hundredths of one per cent. of the capital. In 1870, on a capital of over $83,000,000, a deficiency against income was reported of $292,021 43. Thus, according to these reports, in the result of more than trebling their capital has been to almost, if not quite, wipe out the income of the road. Besides, these directors have been guilty of misconduct—first, in refusing to stockholders their rights of transfer; second, in fraudulently seizing stock the owners of which were endeavoring to have transfers made; third, in refusing to exhibit to shareholders the stock, ledger and transfer books as required by law. Fourth, in passing a fraudulent by-law denying the right of transfers of stock upon trusts and agencies which are perfectly lawful. Fifth, in voting and procuring votes upon stock standing on the books in the names of parties who have long since parted with it, while preventing the transfer of such stock to the present actual owners by seizure, orders of receivership and other fraudulent acts. The bill now before the Committee proposes first, to repeal the Classification act, so far as it affects the Erie Railway; second, to provide for a new election on the second Tuesday of July next, to be held by impartial inspectors, and to prohibit persons, who have parted with their stock, from voting on it in person or by proxy, though it may stand in their names on the books. It also contains provisions designed to secure the stockholders their rights of inspection and examination of the transfer-books and stock ledgers, and for a review by an impartial tribunal of any election of the directors of the company, and to prevent an interference with the election by injunctions fraudulently obtained and improvidently granted.

The Senate Committee on Privileges and Elections met this afternoon to consider the ROSSA vs. Tweed contested seat case. Mr. HARRIS appeared for TWEED, but as no one appeared for ROSSA, the Committee adjourned until the 27th instant.

DESTRUCTIVE FIRES.

A Block of Stores in Toronto Burned—Loss About $500,000.

TORONTO, Canada, Feb. 15.—Nine of eleven wholesale stores known as the "Iron Block" in this city, were burned last night. The stores were occupied by some of the heaviest merchants. The following are the names of the sufferers, with their probable losses: Staunton & Co., paper manufacturers, $10,000; Dolsbie & Co., dry-goods, $6,000; John Robertson, dry-goods, $40,000; Jennings & Brandon, dry-goods, $40,000; John Charlesworth, dry-goods, $10,000; Barclay, Evans & Co., boots and shoes, $60,000; Mark Fisher & Co., dry-goods, $15,000; Livingston & Johnston, dry-goods, $25,000; Thos. Walls & Co., dry-goods, $50,000; S. S. Campbell, belting, $5,000; Brunel & Russell, drugs, $5,000; National Straw-works, $3,000. The total loss on stock and buildings is estimated at $500,000. A considerable quantity of goods were saved by removal. Three of the stores were owned by Moses Staunton, four by William Myles, and the other four by Thompson & Burns. The following are the principal insurances; several are considerably over the amount of loss: Walls & Co., $107,000; Barclay, Evans & Co., $47,000; William Myles' building, $36,000; Jennings & Brandon, $20,000; John Robertson, $50,000; Dobbie & Currie, $70,000; Livingston & Johnston, $15,000; S. S. Campbell, $5,000. The following offices suffer: Commercial Union, $16,000; Lancashire, $26,000; Andes, $22,000; Queen City, $7,000; Western, $26,000; Guardian, $14,000; British America, $5,000; Scottish Imperial, Unity, Liverpool and London and Globe, $44,000; North British and Mercantile, $21,000; Imperial, $30,000; Northern, $7,000; Ætna, of Hartford, $18,000.

The Methodist Book Concern in Nashville Partially Burned.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Feb. 15.—A fire last night in the Methodist Book Concern extended to the composing-room. The materials and machinery were destroyed, together with the stereotype foundry and Dr. SUMNER'S extensive library, containing many rare and valuable books. The bindery belonged to JOHN LOCHEN, of Philadelphia, and was uninsured. His loss is about $15,000. The loss in the composing-room is $10,000, and in the foundry $5,000. The plates in the vaults are uninjured. The damage to the presses is $3,000, and to the building $5,000. The insurance on the portion of the building burned is $5,000. The materials were all uninsured. A large number of persons are thrown out of employment by this disaster. The origin of the fire is unknown.

A Church and Five Buildings Burned in Sharpsburg, Ky.

MOUNT STERLING, Ky., Feb. 15.—A destructive fire occurred at Sharpsburg, Ky., on Tuesday, consuming the Presbyterian Church and five of the best business houses in the town. Three men were arrested, charged with causing the fire, and it was with difficulty that the mob could be prevented from hanging them.

Suicide of a Convert from Judaism to Christianity.

KINGSTON, Jam., Feb. 8.—Rev. Mr. ROSENFELDT, a convert from Judaism, who was sent out here by a society for the propagation of Christian knowledge among the Jews, committed suicide in his lodgings. He left a letter upon his dressing-table addressed to the Bishop of Kingston, declaring that he had been driven to the act because others were conspiring against him, but that he died in the full belief of the truth of Christianity. After making provision for his wife, who is now in Germany, he left the balance of his estate to be used in aid of the conversion of the Jews. The death of this gentleman produced a profound sensation in Kingston, particularly among the Jews, who were of opinion, before Mr. ROSENFELDT'S letter was read, that he had renounced Christianity.

THE PRESIDENTIAL CAMPAIGN.

Letter from Senator Wilson Defining his Position.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 15.—Senator WILSON has addressed the following letter to a political and personal friend:

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 13, 1872.

DEAR SIR: You ask me "how the withdrawal by Mr. COLFAX of his irrevocable decision not to be a candidate affects your position?" I have to say in reply, that when the Vice-President announced that he should not be a candidate for re-election, and the position might be claimed by the friends of some Eastern or Southern man, many gentlemen, some of whom had kindly supported me in 1868, and others who had supported Mr. COLFAX, Mr. WADE, or Mr. FENTON, said, or wrote to me, that they intended to give me their influence for the Vice-Presidency. I had just been elected for the fourth time to the Senate, had entered upon the full term, and had every reason to be gratified and satisfied with my position. This evidence of the personal regard and friendship of many of the noblest men of several States could not but greatly enhance the value which prizes recognition by the whole country, a feeling entertained by most men who have long been in the service of their States. After ascertaining that the Vice-President's decision was final, I assented to the request of friends before saving for Europe, early in June last. After my return and before the meeting of Congress, several leading men, in more than a dozen States, many of whom I had served with in Congress, assured me that they and the Republicans of their States were for my nomination. I have left this matter to others, and up to this date, the 13th of February, I have not written a word to anyone nor replied to the many letters I have received on the subject. The revocation by the Vice-President of his declaration was to me a surprise. It placed me in an unpleasant position, and my first impulse was to withdraw from the contest. But by the advice of some of the best Republicans of the land, East, West and South, I leave the question to personal and political friends. Whatever may be the result, I shall be content and shall do what I can for the unity and success of the Republican Party, whoever may be its candidates, for I am bound to it alike by conviction and by association, by gratitude for its deeds of patriotism and liberty, and by hopes of the services I may yet render to the country.

MEXICAN AFFAIRS.

The Revolution Spreading—Juarez' Condition Declared Critical—A Report that Gen. Grant Intends to Support Him as a Last Alternative.

HAVANA, Feb. 15.—The steamer City of Merida arrived today from Vera Cruz. She brings the following important advices from Mexio:

CITY OF MEXICO, Feb. 8.—Gen. JULIO GARCIA, at the head of 500 men, pronounced in Colima, and no revolution is spreading in that State. A revolutionary movement is on foot in Guadalajara. The Legislature refused to grant Gov. VILJARTE dictatorial powers. The Governor nevertheless assumed them, and has imprisoned several influential politicians. Gen. CORONA, accompanied by an escort of 100 men, has disappeared. It is supposed he has left the country.

The Government has gained advantages in the State of Guerero. The largest half of the State of Puebla and of Vera Cruz is in the hands of the revolutionists. DOMINGUEZ, the revolutionary leader, is in the State of Vera Cruz. MENDEZ is Commander-in-Chief, and has his head-quarters in the Sierra Puebla. Oaxaca is in the hands of the Government; but ALATORRE'S army is required in that State to keep the peace.

The body of Ex-Gov. FELIX DIAZ was brought to Pachutla on the 23d ult. It was stated that he was killed in an engagement, but it is generally believed that he was treacherously surprised and assassinated. Reports from different purces indicate that he was assassinated; but the Federal commander insists that he was killed in an engagement.

President JUAREZ is gradually increasing his dictatorship. Although the Governors protest against the proclamations of a state of siege, the States of Oaxaca, San Luis and Hidalgo are under military rule altogether. The States of Nuevo-Leon, Durango, Zacatecas and Sinaloa have revolutionary Governments. Gov. COSIA, at the head of 800 men, evacuated Zacatecas on hearing of the defeat of the Federals.

It is reported that President JUAREZ applied to President GRANT for assistance, and that President GRANT replied that he would support President JUAREZ as a last alternative. President JUAREZ intends to proclaim martial law in the State of Guanajuato.

A band sacked Pasoancho, near Cordoba, on the 3d inst., and afterward stopped the trains on the Vera Cruz Railroad. Gen. ZEPEDA defeated the revolutionists on the 2d at San Filipe. The bulk of the Federal forces is concentrating at Guanaguato and in the capital. Two revolutionary vessels captured a German lark carrying a battalion of Federals, near Matatlan, the Federals having forcibly seized the vessel.

LATER.—The revolutionists have captured Aguas Calientes. Juaristas say, President GRANT must now act promptly if he intends to help JUAREZ. The number of revolutionists in the field is estimated at 30,000, the largest ever in arms. The Government is, nevertheless, holding out.

A plan is proposed for JUAREZ to retire, resign, and permit MEJIA, his Minister of War, to assume the Presidency. Gen. SANCHEZ OCHOA has fallen back from Aguas Calientes to Lagos. A large force of revolutionists is marching on Guadalajara. Consternation prevails here.

THE WEATHER.

Synopsis and Probabilities.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 16.—1 A. M.—The highest barometer, which was, Wednesday night, central in Tennessee, is now, apparently, in South Carolina. The barometer has fallen decidedly over the Mississippi Valley, and has risen slowly over the Middle and Eastern States. An area of low pressure has apparently developed rapidly in Texas and Kansas, and now extends, with rain, to the Mississippi Valley. Cloudy weather is reported thence north-eastward over the Ohio Valley, the Middle States and lower lakes. Clear weather has prevailed in the South Atlantic States and in the extreme north-west. Lower barometer, with rain, has been reported from Oregon.

PROBABILITIES.

The barometer will probably fall on Friday very generally from the Rocky Mountains to the Atlantic coast, with cloudy weather; the lowest pressure move north-westward over the Ohio Valley, with rain and fresh winds; northeasterly winds prevail on Lakes Erie and Michigan, and westerly winds, backing to east, in the Middle and Eastern States. Dangerous winds are not anticipated for Friday morning in the Atlantic and Gulf States.

THE BROOKLYN RING.

Flight of an Associate of "Boss" McLaughlin—The Sheriff Said to be After Him for Forgery.

WILLIAM L. GILL, one of "Boss" MCLAUGHLIN'S right-hand men, is among the missing. He stepped out on the evening of the 8th inst., since which time he has not been seen, one of the causes that led to his hasty departure being a desire to evade the Sheriff of Kings County, who was armed with a warrant for GILL'S arrest. Great efforts have been made to keep the facts in the case from the public, but the truth seems to be that WM. L. GILL is a fugitive from justice on the charge of forgery.

It is alleged that he drew up a mortgage representing $4,500, signed the name of Mrs. LEE, of the Mansion House, Brooklyn, to it, and forged a certificate of acknowledgment upon which he effected a loan. The crime was discovered, justice gave chase and GILL departed. GILL is a member of the Bar, an influential and prominent Ring Democrat, and Chairman of the Law Committee of the Board of Education, Brooklyn. He is about thirty years of age, and lived at the Mansion House in splendid style. Other transactions of an equally questionable character, alleged to have been perpetrated by GILL, are coming to the surface. Among them is a recent dealing with his father-in-law, wherein that gentleman was duped to the tune of $10,000, a suit for the recovery of that amount being now pending.

WHOLESALE SMUGGLING

An Extraordinary Series of Operations in Linen and Jute Goods.

The Government Defrauded and Merchants Perplexed—The Conspiracy Unmasked and the Alleged Principal Entrapped.

Quite a sensation prevailed in mercantile circles of this City during the past few days, over the development of alleged frauds by which the Government has probably lost a large amount of revenue, and the reputable linen importing houses of New-York sustained serious embarrassment to their business. The matter came to the surface last week through the arrest of one W. J. POLLOCK, an importer of this City, on a complaint from the office of the Special Agents of the Treasury; and the system pursued in these alleged schemes of fraud and irregular importations is marked by adroitness rarely matched by the most cunning devices. The Government detectives have been somewhat puzzled in getting a clue at the unlawful business, or fixing upon the precise theory upon which certain transactions, under suspicion, could be successfully carried on. And not until the combined efforts of the Treasury authorities and several merchants were elicited in the investigation, was the modus operandi of the smuggler unraveled, and the author discovered.

As before stated, the leading linen importers of New-York have experienced a sensible depression in trade for several months. Not that the demand for goods in certain lines had fallen off, but because the market seemed to be controlled, for some unaccountable reasons by particular persons, who offered inducements in prices that could not be competed with successfully by those who received importations in the regular way. This was especially true of fabrics known to the trade as Dundee goods. This condition of things existed until it became a matter of serious importance to houses pursuing a legitimate business to know whether they could go on or not, as their trade had become at times almost paralyzed. Finally a solution of the difficulty was sought in a systematic and determined investigation of the subject, whereupon intimations reached the Custome authorities that the interests of the revenue might be involved as well as that of individuals. The result of a searching inquiry discloses something like wholesale rascality.

It appears from evidence already adduced that large shipments of linen goods have been regularly received per the various Liverpool steamers since the early part of last Summer, from a firm on the other side named J. H. BORRIE & Co. The goods embraced nearly all kinds of linen articles, but chiefly consisted of Dundee goods, such as burlaps, jute toweling, and an immense quantity of jute bags. In almost every instance the consignments were made "to order," and invoiced to one JOHN DAVENPORT, of New-York. In some cases, however, invoices came to Messrs. MORTON, BLISS & Co., bankers, in order probably to secure the punctual payment thereof by the parties who ordered the goods, the bankers being only collecting agents, but having no interest as owners therein, and hence totally ignorant of the fraud contemplated. It will be observed, first, that all these consignments came in an indirect way from Liverpool; instead of taking the natural course of direct shipment from the foreign linen markets, and this feature formed one suspicious circumstance in the business. It having come to the light that the goods received in these consignments were being "sacrificed" in the market, and the wholesale trade seriously prejudiced thereby, it became a subject of anxious inquiry who this JOHN DAVENPORT was that had so much to "sacrifice" or throw away. After faithful research, JOHN DAVENPORT was abandoned as a myth, but in his stead a live man appeared in the person of one THOMAS MCGRATH, boss cartman, pseudo accountant, &c. He it was found to have made the entries at the Custom-house, as attorney for the mythical JOHN DAVENPORT, which name was, doubtless, used to screen the principal offender; and the conjecture arose, meanwhile, whether DAVENPORT and the employer of MCGRATH were not one, and MCGRATH was W. J. POLLOCK'S cartman. By a careful analysis of the invoices and entries in the custom-house, and comparison thereof with the goods sold, the existence of extensive fraud was pretty conclusively shown. Of the many invoices involving thousands of dollars, the mention of a few will serve to illustrate the manner in which the frauds occurred: In the case of jute bags, a consignment was received per steamship Wisconsin on her previous voyage in December, consisting of 100 bales of bags, each bale purporting to contain 500 bags, and invoiced at twopence halfpenny per bag, making in all 50,000 bags, whereon duty was paid at the price specified. The marks and numbers on each bale were made upon a piece of canvas sewed on the respective bales, so that the moment the goods were removed from the view of the Custom-house officers the marks and numbers were taken off, and the identity thereof destroyed, so far as comparison with the invoice was concerned. Among these bales would be one or more to answer to the invoice description, and these were usually sent to a public store, thus misleading the Custom-house as to the exact quantity and quality of merchandise. In one instance, however, an entire lot of thirty bales, per steam-ship Baltic, in September, went to public store, and were withdrawn upon an alleged fraudulent invoice and entry, notwithstanding the measurement of the bales in the bill of lading, upon which freight charges were paid, called for about 45,000 bags, or three times the quantity on which duty was paid. The presumption arises, therefore, that the examination was not very thorough in the public store. But in in the instance first cited, while the goods were much undervalued, the actual quantity or number of bags was 150,000, instead of 50,000. In the matter of prices, also undervaluation, is alleged on all shipments by at least fifty, and in many cases one hundred per cent. What with undervaluation at such a rate, and large importations, a pretty profitable business must have been realized.

Competent judges place the quantity of bags brought in after the manner described, at two or three millions, and no wonder is now expressed that reputable dealers suffered accordingly. Of course these goods were sold at a large discount, and money was made even then. In the case of burlaps, the same system of false invoice prevailed; also in the consignment of fine linen goods, the invoices called for coarse jute toweling, &c. The deeper this thing is probed, the more enormous the fraud appears, and princely fortunes are said to have been made at the expense of the Government and honest merchants. Three large invoices of bags and linens are now in the possession of the Government, and will probably be confiscated. An attemnt to enter two lots of linens as coarse jute toweling was recently made by MCGRATH. An invoice for one lot was sworn to before the United States Consul for thirteen cases of jute toweling valued at £99 0s. 6d., and another lot of twenty-two cases at £167 11s. 6d., but becoming alarmed entry was made on private invoices, the first lot at £888 18s. 7d., and the twenty-two cases at about £1,600, making a difference of some $12,000 on two small shipments. If, therefore, these specimens be anything to judge by, the rascality committed must be almost unfathomable. Upon such revelations as to details, the investigation was directed to the discovery of the principal actor, or real party in interest and ownership of the goods, and through diligent search, something stronger than suspicion rested upon WM. J. POLLOCK, of the quondam firm of W. J. POLLOCK & Co., Broadway, but the "company" dissolved from the firm some months ago. POLLOCK was thereupon arrested by the United States Marshal last Tuesday, and held to bail in the sum of $20,000 to await the action of the Grand Jury. Mr. HAMILTON BABCOCK appeared as bondsman. A warrant is also out for the arrest of the facile dupe of POLLOCK, who may be able to show that he was an innocent agent, but none the less willing tool in the hands of an adventurous tradesman. POLLOCK is represented to have made considerable flourish on the avenues and at fashionable Summer resorts, and he is also said to have had a little unpleasantness with the revenue authorities once before on account of some little irregularities. The linen importers, however, may now reasonably look for some improvement in business, and the Government will probably realize more duties.

Excitement Among the Stockholders of the Eastern Railroad.

BOSTON, Mass., Feb. 15.—The stockholders of the Eastern Railroad held an excited and protracted meeting today, the principal business being the choice of a Board of Directors. There were seven tickets offered, and after a session of seven hours the Committee appointed to count votes departed without having completed the count, but the following ticket is, no doubt, elected: Samuel Hooper, Franklin Haven, Benjamin F. Stevens, Thornton K. Lothrop, all of Boston; John Wooldredge, of Lynn; Henry L. Williams, of Salem; Iebabod Goodwind, of Portsmouth. About 25,000 votes were cast. The meeting is adjourned until Monday to receive the report of the Committee.

GENERAL EUROPEAN NEWS.

Bonapartists at Work in France—M. Barthemy to be Minister to Washington—Nomination of Catholic Bishops.

PARIS, Feb. 15.—The adherents of the Ex-Emperor NAPOLEON are actively engaged among the working men of the Arrondissements of Belleville and Villette, endeavoring to create a feeling in favor of his return to the throne of France. It is now rumored that M. BERTHEMY will be the Minister to Washington, and M. DE LA RONCIERE the Minister to Rome. Some delegates of the Right in the Assembly are going to Antwerp to submit to the Count DE CHAMBORD their programme of action with regard to monarchy in France, and endeavor to obtain his sanction thereto; but there is little hope of success; it is a foregone conclusion that the Count will refuse to make any concessions.

The Alabama Claims—Rumors and Opinions in Paris—The Ballot in England.

PARIS, Feb. 16.—It is reported here on good authority that the United States will not waive their claims on England for indirect damages, but may be induced to moderate them. Hon. CHARLES FRANCIS ADAMS, the American member of the Geneva tribunal will return to Europe in May. The Journal des Debats, commenting on the controversy over the Alabama claims, declares that England and America are both wrong, and fears a protracted misunderstanding may lead to a rupture.

LONDON, Feb. 15.—In the House of Commons, to-night, the Ballot bill passed its second reading by a vote of 109 against 51. The House of Lords engaged in a long and bitter debate on a motion made by the Marquis of SALISBURY to censure the Government for COLLIER'S appointment. The motion was rejected by a very close vote, viz., 89 to 87.

Affairs in France—Tax on Newspapers.

PARIS, Feb. 15.—All hopes of a fusion of the Orleanists and Legitimists are abandoned. The Assembly today debated with much feeling a proposal to head all tax papers with the words, "occasioned by the war of 1870." The Left moved to add to these words "declared by Napoleon," and the Right moved as a further addition, "and continued by the Government of September." The amendment of the Left was adopted and the proposal passed in the Assembly.

OUR CRIPPLED COMMERCE.

Causes of Its Depression—Important Maritime Statistics—The American Navy, and Its Decline—Letter from Donald McKay.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

I have been requested recently to set before the public some information relating to the depressed condition of our merchant marine. It is well known at home and abroad that the United States stood before the late rebellion as the leading nation of the world in amount of merchant marine tonnage, also for beauty of construction, and their able command and seamen. From the New-York Marine Register for 1871 I have compiled a table of ships and barks eighteen years old and upward, built in the United States, and rated as still in sea-going condition, and find their number to be 490 ships and 382 barks, with an average age of twenty-four and a half years. From this fact it is proven that wooden vessels built of white-oak, pitch-pine and locust, having copper and iron fastenings, are more durable than iron vessels, superior in speed for long voyages, and preferable in any case for certain cargoes of merchandise, such as tea, sugar, guano and rice.

It may be said that the iron ship requires only light repairs compared with a wooden one. This is so if the wooden vessel is built of poor material and badly constructed, but in parallel cases the iron ship is most expensive. Take for example the British Government transport Megaera, built of iron by Mr. FAIRBARN, who is well known as the most thorough and practical iron ship-builder of England, and an author of some valuable works on iron ship-building. This ship sailed from Plymouth for Australia in 1870, having 340 troops on board, and half way between Cape of Good Hope and St. Paul's she sprung a leak and was run ashore on the island. An Admiralty report was made on her, and we learn that when ten years old she was thoroughly repaired, newly riveted, and her inside covered with cement to keep the iron from oxidizing. The Admiralty report further says that no iron bottom over twelve years old is seaworthy. I have recently examined in the port of Boston an iron ship called the Hindostan, built in Glasgow in 1863, rating A1 by British Lloyds. On her voyage to Boston she experienced no unusual heavy weather, yet the surveyors report that they found eleven beams, between the fore and main masts, broken entirely off at each end at the clamps, parting wholly from the frames and gusset straps, and two of the main-hatch beams broken in four places. These examples, with hundreds of other similar cases that might be given, prove that an iron ship is not so safe as a wooden one, unless she is extra built. From what I have said, it must not be understood that there are not any good iron vessels built, for, having crossed the Atlantic many times in the last thirty years in both wooden and iron steamers, in all seasons of the year, I believe that an iron vessel is best where a propeller is used for crossing the Atlantic and other short voyages, and for river purposes. With the fact before us of 137 iron steamers constantly plying between the United States and Europe, any fair, candid mind must acknowledge that the most of them are fine, strong seaboats, and well constructed. Some of them, of course, are poor seaboats, owing to a bad design of model, having no sheer forward, and but little stability, and the consequence is they take on board large quantities of water forward. Since 1860 the United States has lost in sea-going tonnage 450,000 tons. In the year 1855 there was built in the United States 2,094 vessels, with a combined tonnage of 583,450 tons; while in the year 1870 there were only built 746 vessels amounting to 186,014 tons, showing a tonnage difference of over 75 per cent. loss. Keeping on at this ratio our tonnage will be soon exhausted. The United States is the only nation that has an abundance of superior wood for ship-building purposes. Taking our pitch-pine of the South, there is none in the world to compare with it; our live and white oak is superior to that of Great Britain, both for strength, soundness and durability, as proved by the following table:

WEIGHT OF A CUBIC FOOT OF

	Virginia White-oak.	Southern Pitch pine.
	Round. Square.	Round. Square.
	lbs. lbs.	lbs. lbs.
After felling	64.74 67.20	47.81 49.31
Five years after felling	58.91 60.53	39.93 42.10
Four years after felling	48.97 49.59	34.28 35.46

Each of the above numbers are the mean of experiments on twelve different pieces of timber cut from different trees, and the experiments were made by Mr. JARVIS, timber inspector of Gosport Navy-yard.

Weight of a cubic foot of live-oak, according to GRIFFITH: Green, 78.69 pounds; seasoned, 66.75 pounds. This timber is used for the frames of the United States men-of-war ships, and is considered by all naval men to be almost imperishable.

Tensile strength of American white-oak and English oak, per one square inch; from APPLETON'S Dictionary of Mechanics: English oak, 8,820 pounds to 10,224 pounds; American white-oak, 11,501 pounds.

Specific gravity and transverse strength, per one square inch, of English oak, and American white and live oak; according to various observers; extracted from a table published in Vol. V. of the Professional Papers of the Royal Engineers.

Name of Observer.	English Oak. Spec. gr.	Strength. lbs.	American White Oak. Spec. gr.	Strength. lbs.
Lieut. Nelson	.834	1,629	645	1,699
Mr. Moore	.876	1,949	836	1,699
Mr. Barlow	.934	1,672	872	1,760
Lieut. Dennison	.783	1,556	772	1,809
Mean results	.829	1,694	781	1,743

American live-oak—Specific gravity, 1.160; strength, 1,862 lbs. According to these experiments, the advantage of lightness, combined with strength, is entirely on the side of American white-oak.

From the comparison of the oak of the two countries, it is proven that ours is superior to that of England, notwithstanding all the prejudices of British Lloyds which we have to contend with. The favorite English motto, "fair play," is lost sight of by British Lloyds, when we ask them to give vessels of our flag the rating we merit, and should receive on their books. You cannot find our vessels entered in the register of British Lloyds, nor a classification given only; but as soon as the flag is changed, and she becomes a British vessel, they will then rate and class her on the same principle as their own build, and in accordance with her own merit, and we are called selfish and unjust for not opening free trade to the English flag. In all the marine registers of our country every vessel entering our ports is rated and classed, no matter under what flag she may be, and it is done without prejudice, too, for in many cases I know the rating of foreign ships here in the United States has been higher than would be given our own ships built of the same material.

We have in the United States, as is well known, complicated and unsatisfactory systems of rating and classification of vessels, for there are, including the French Lloyd's agency, four distinct systems, each one claiming to be the best in manner of construction, and yet widely at variance. This causes great confusion and loss to ship-owners in foreign ports, and I would suggest as a remedy that the United States Government adopt for our vessels a universal system of rating. This, I think, would be a great national relief, if it could be done without interfering with the private rights of ship-owners.

Our Pennsylvania iron, of which we have an inexhaustible supply, is well known to be superior in quality to that of England for marine purposes, and in addition to having the best materials, we also have the best skilled labor in the world. We must have iron propellers for our European trade, and, with relief from the Government, they can be built in this country as cheap and as good, both hull and machinery, as in Great Britain.

Since the close of the war our ship-yards have been officially visited yearly by Congressional committees for the purpose of ascertaining and reporting to Congress the condition of American ship-building, and they found most of the yards vacant, with grass growing where formerly keels were laid. The question naturally arises, what has become of the thousands of skilled mechanics who were once kept so busy in those yards, constructing and equipping in one year such a vast number of vessels as I have shown? I have met many of my best ship-building mechanics in various States of the Union, even scattered as far as San Francisco and Oregon, engaged not in ship-building, but in the building of wharves, bridges, houses, factories, &c., learning a new trade, mostly, after passing the meridian of life.

Now, how can this depression in ship-building be remedied? For comparing its past record with the present it is evident that a radical wrong exists, and the remedy, the mechanical class with myself, say is in the power of Congress; but the doctrine having existed so long, mechanics have but little hope of any legislation effecting a revival—seven years is a long time to wait the fulfilment of Congressional promises.

I hope the time will arrive soon when again we will stand ahead of the world in the extent of our commerce. Hon. SAM. HOOPER, of Massachusetts, has introduced a bill for the building of ten sloops-of-war; for the sake of our shipwrights and engineers this should have been twenty, ten to have been distributed in private yards to be iron propellers designed as transports, and would be well adapted for carrying our mails. The British Government, for the purpose of assisting private yards, during the last eight years has built thirty-one vessels, war and transport, with an aggregate tonnage of 117,116 tons.

To show the facilities we have for ship-building, and also the present depressed condition of that branch of labor, we will look around Boston and vicinity, for example, and we find instead of twenty-one ship-building firms formerly all busily engaged, employing hundreds of men, only three firms in operation engaged in building a total of one ship and two schooners. I have already stated that we have the best skilled labor with the best material in abundance at our command and the greatest facilities for ship-building, and, as example, I would here with state that with these skilled mechanics I constructed in fourteen months' time, during the years 1855 and 1856, fourteen ships, with an aggregate tonnage of 31,000 tons register, and eight of these ships being on English account, were delivered in England within the time named—fourteen months. Being a practical man and understanding this line of the business thoroughly, I know whereof what I write, having built and equipped 138 ships, registering 150,000 tons.

Perhaps it is not out of place in this connection to suggest further protection for our flag by placing all foreign passenger-steamers under the same rules and regulations as the laws of England applies to the United States passenger-vessel as well as her own. There passenger-vessels, of any nationality, are compelled to comply with the passenger laws for the safety of life. The United States Government permits all foreign passenger-steamers to leave United States ports without any compliance with United States passenger steam-boat laws, thus giving them extra privileges, because they have the protection of a foreign flag. They may leave our ports with no restriction as to number of passengers; having no boats, spare anchors, or life-preservers, if they choose to go so; may go with a broken propeller or crippled machinery, while the United States flag has to comply strictly with the laws.

While on the subject of the depression of American commerce I would add another fact relating thereto. Messrs. WILLIAM F. WELD & Co. have had for two years, till recently, the frames for two wooden ships awaiting some action of Congress for relief before building. Finally, having given up all hopes of aid from Government, they shipped one of these ship's frames to St. John's, N. B., having made a contract to build and equip the ship there and adopt the British flag, saving a large amount by so doing, while our ship-building mechanics will be employed at their new trades of wharf, bridge, dock and factory building.

The New-York Chamber of Commerce has presented a memorial to Congress asking for a subsidy for the purpose of carrying the United States mails to Europe. This would be a national measure of relief, even were more money granted than is paid to foreign flags; certainly there are enough facts before Congress on this subject to enable them to take some action toward relief this present session.

The following is a list of duties (in gold) upon various articles entering into the construction of a new ship of 1,000 tons.

Iron, 120,906 pounds	$1,209 06
Iron spikes, 2,998 pounds	149 15
Galvanized spikes, 2,409 pounds	216 81
Castings, 14,408 pounds	216 12
Chain cable and rigging chains, 24,800 pounds	1,487 80
Anchors, 16,705 pounds	250 75
Metal and bolts, 20,334 pounds	711 69
Sails, 1,000 pounds	310 00
Manilla, 11,423 pounds	570 77
Hemp, 28,174 pounds	563 22
Duck for sails and house-top, including spare sails, 1,180 yards	714 90
Chain pumps, 1,800 pounds	36 00
Copper bolts, composition castings, paints, oils, groceries, cabin trimmings, nails and sundry outfits	1,295 00
Total	$7,510 00

Although in times past I have written so much with regard to our navy, yet I feel that I cannot close without again bringing it before the public. At the present time our navy list shows that we are in a most deplorable condition. In looking it over we see we have but very few sea-going war ships fit for foreign stations. Notwithstanding we had a large fleet at the close of the war, but these were only adapted for harbor defense, and built expressly for the purpose of shoal draft to protect our coast where vessels of heavy draft fit for foreign service would have been useless. The comparison of these few vessels with the navies of foreign Powers should cause every true American to blush for shame, and I sincerely hope there is patriotism enough left in our representatives in Congress to pass a bill and put our NAVY in a respectable attitude before the world. The vacancies under the new organization of the various Bureaus of Construction and Engineering have been filled by men of skill and ability.

The honorable Secretary of the Navy is a man of talent and favors progress, and his selections for the heads of the Departments of Construction and Engineering are men whose ability is not surpassed in America. They can construct hulls and machinery that will be equal if not superior to any in the world of their class.

American citizens feel a pride in their flag. Let it once more wave over every sea!

GENERAL SESSIONS BUSINESS.

Long Sentence of Another Highway Robber—Trial of Harris for Homicide—His Acquittal—The Trial of Moore Postponed—Accused and Complainant in Custody.

The Court of General Sessions was crowded yesterday, two important cases being on the calendar for trial—one of them HARRIS, for the killing of HASSEN, and the other that of MOORE, the notorious emigrant swindler. A number of other cases were called, some of the accused being acquitted, and the trials of others postponed. A case of highway robbery was tried, and Recorder HACKETT sentenced the offender to the full extent of the law, as Judge BEDFORD had done on Tuesday, giving the criminal, JOHN RYAN, twenty years' imprisonment at hard labor. The prisoner RYAN, twenty-eight years of age, a wood-molder, from Troy, on Sunday, 24th December, at 2 A. M., assaulted Mrs. LENA EICHENGELDT, of No. 493 Ninth-avenue, who was on her way to a drug-store in the neighborhood to get some medicine for her sick husband. RYAN stopped her in the street, and, demanding her watch, grabbed her by the throat, choked her, and snatching her pocket-book containing a couple of dollars, threatened to kill her if she screamed. RYAN was fortunately arrested by Officer FISHER, and has now been sent to here Judge BEDFORD and Recorder HACKETT say that they intend to consign all such desperadoes convicted before them, for the full period allowed by the law.

Great interest was manifested in the trial of Wm. H. HARRIS, mate of the schooner Julia E. Garmage, for the murder of SAMUEL H. HASSEN, on the 1st of January last. It will be remembered that a fight occurred on board the vessel, of which HARRIS was the mate, when it was lying at the foot of West Twenty-fourth-street. HARRIS was set upon by several of the crew who had a grudge against him, and HASSEN, who began the quarrel, was mortally stabbed by HARRIS in the mêlée. Yesterday Capt. PITCHER, THOS. ANDERSON and BURLEIGH, of the schooner; Officer MURPHY, who arrested the prisoner, and PATRICK RILEY, a night watchman, who saw a part of the affray, were examined, and the testimony elicited at the Coroner's inquest was substantially given again. Recorder HACKETT delivered a careful charge to the jury, who, without leaving their seats, returned a verdict of not guilty. HARRIS, a big burly seaman, burst into tears on the announcement, and was led out of the court-room weeping like a child.

The case of CHARLES MOORE was called, and the prisoner's counsel pleading that his associate counsel, Mr. CLINTON, was out of the City, showing a telegraphic dispatch from him, asked for a postponement of his trial. His counsel urged that the delay in this case was a response to the urging of the Press, and he claimed that any clamor should not deprive MOORE of the opportunity of preparing his defense properly, and having the counsel of his choice.

Recorder HACKETT, upon condition that both the accused and the complainant should be held in custody, adjourned the case for peremptory trial on Monday next. MOORE was sent to the Tombs, and KERNACK to the House of Detention, to insure their attendance at the Court on the day for trial.

Counselor BLUNT appeared as counsel in a turtle case which Mr. BERGH, in the interests of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, wished to have transferred from the Court of Special Sessions to this Court. In answer to an inquiry from the Recorder, Mr. BLUNT explained that his client was complained of for laying the turtle on its back. But it was not the turtle he wanted removed, it was the case he meant. Assistant District-Attorney FELLOWS said that if there was any dispute as to a place of removal for the turtle, he could suggest one, whereupon the Recorder and everybody smiled, and the motion was granted.

THE SUSPENDED BANKS.

The Market Savings Bank—Further Revelations Concerning the Acts of the Officers and Trustees.

All the officers and active trustees of the Market Savings Bank, many of whom had considerable sums deposited, drew out their entire balances one year before the suspension of the bank, so that during the last year of its existence not one of the officials or trustees of this institution had any pecuniary interest in it. In order to keep up a semblance of confidence in the bank, several trustees invested the contents of their children's "banks" for safe keeping there. These trusts generally amounted to from 5 or 6 to 25 or 30, all in pennies. The paternal anxiety of one or two of these trustees induced them to draw out even these trifling sums shortly before the collapse. Mr. DENNIS, the trustee and ex-receiver, had the comparatively large sum of $20 deposited on behalf of his children. The weight of business cares is supposed to have caused him to forget himself so far as to allow this money to remain in the bank at its suspension. Upon returning to his home on the memorable day of suspension, it is reported that the tears of his children recalled him to a sense of his paternal duty, and on the Monday following, being the Receiver, he withdrew all the little savings of his offspring. About two weeks ago it was announced that all the trustees of the bank had agreed to contribute $200 each as a reward for the apprehension of CONKLIN. Since that time nothing has been heard of this reward, and CONKLIN is still a fugitive.

The Guardian Savings Bank—Paying Small Depositors.

The Guardian Savings Bank was again opened yesterday for the purpose of paying off all deposits under $200 in full, and a dividend of twenty-five per cent. to depositors who hold larger claims. During the entire day only fifty creditors appeared and were paid, making $65,000 paid out since Monday last. Mr. QUINLAN, the receiver, complains of the tardiness of the creditors, and the consequent delay in closing up the business of the bank. Depositors are urged to present themselves and withdraw their balances before Saturday, when the furniture and fixtures of the bank will be sold by auction.

AN ORIENTAL SEEKS JUSTICE.

A Jewish Rabbi Before the Grand Jury—Eastern Etiquette in the District-Attorney's Office.

Rabbi AARONS, from Jerusalem, Palestine, an octogenarian, and said to be at present the oldest Rabbi of the Jewish religion in the United States, has a number of enemies among his people, who have been for some time past industriously traducing his character, it is said. His name has appeared in a certain Jewish organ in an article in which, if the statements are not based on fact, is an outrageously slanderous attack on a venerable ecclesiastic, author of many works known in the East. Rabbi AARONS, who preaches in a small synagogue up-town, has suffered much from these alleged libels, which are made, he says, because he some time ago denounced certain wine-dealers who pretended to sell wine especially prepared for the Jewish religious feasts and observances, which came from a vineyard were it was made, not as required by the Jewish law by people of that faith, but by Gentiles.

The Rabbi, a patriarchal old man, with long gray curls and full, venerable beard, called at the District-Attorney's office, yesterday, and had an interview for the second time with Assistant District-Attorney SULLIVAN. The conversation was carried on through an interpreter, and was, in brief, a request for permission to carry his case before the Grand Jury for their investigation, that he might silence or punish his alleged defamers. The permission was granted by Mr. SULLIVAN, and an order given to have the proper papers drawn up.

The Rabbi, upon hearing that his plea for justice was granted, saluted the District-Attorney with an Oriental salaam, wished that he might live an hundred and twenty years of health and prosperity, and, kissing his hand, withdrew with head bent.

The Glass Homicide—The Inquest—Verdict Against Costello.

An inquest was held yesterday, by Coroner KENNAN, in the case of JOHN GLASS, who died in Park Hospital from injuries inflicted on the morning of Jan. 29, 1872, in McELROY'S dining-saloon, No. 109 Nassau-street, by JAMES COSTELLO, the waiter. The principal witness was LENARIS DALAVAN, who described the affray which is familiar to the public from the accounts given by the Times. After describing how GLASS went into the kitchen, and the dispute that arose between him and COSTELLO in consequence, during which many vile epithets were exchanged between them, the witness stated that COSTELLO asked a patrolman, who was in the saloon eating, to send in an officer to take GLASS out; but the patrolman said, "Settle it yourself," and went out. The affray then commenced, and the wounds were given which have been repeatedly described. There were several other witnesses examined, who deposed to the same facts, and at the conclusion of the testimony the jury rendered a verdict that GLASS had died from injuries inflicted by COSTELLO. The latter was then committed to the Tombs to await the action of the Grand Jury.

Commissioners of Emigration—Resignations of Messrs. Husted and Bell Accepted—Reports.

The Commissioners of Emigration met at 3½ P. M. yesterday. The President, Mr. O'GORMAN, announced the resignation of Mr. HUSTED, and expressed his regret. The resignation was accepted. The resignation of Mr. BELL was also accepted.

A resolution abolishing the two Committees on Repairs and Supplies, and on Salaries and Offices was adopted.

Mr. LYNCH called attention to the fact that work involving the expenditure of money had in some instances been ordered by individual members without consultation with their colleagues, and a resolution was adopted directing that no contract involving the expenditure of more than $250 be made without the consent of the Board.

Mr. O'GORMAN was unanimously re-elected President, for which he returned thanks. The Board then went into executive session. The annual report to the Legislature was considered, and ordered that it be sent to Albany.

The steam passengers arrived to Feb. 15 was 7,249, against 4,983 at same date last year. The balance with the City Chamberlain is $1,287 19.

Minor Crimes and Casualties.

Dr. JOHN BEACH yesterday made a post-mortem examination in the case of JOHN PETERSON, who died at No. 129 Washington-street, from injuries, as was alleged, inflicted on Dec. 2, 1871, by JAMES FENTON, during an affray at the corner of Washington and Carlisle streets. The post-mortem showed that death had been caused by cerebral apoplexy, and that it could not be traced, even remotely, to the injuries.

AUGUST HORLE died yesterday in the German Hospital from injuries received some time ago by being run over by a street railroad car in Williamsburg.

A verdict of death from natural causes was rendered by a Coroner's Jury yesterday in the case of JOHN FITZPATRICK, who died at No. 81 Beaver-street, as had been alleged, by injuries inflicted some weeks ago by a school-mate.

ADOLPH BERN, No. 261 Bowery, was committed yesterday by Justice HOGAN, on a charge of selling obscene pictures and books. DENNIS LINEHAN was also committed by the same Magistrate on a charge of picking the pocket of JAMES DUNN, of No. 20 East Broadway, of a watch worth $35.

An inquest was held by Coroner HERMAN, yesterday, in the case of GEORGE FRESLEY, aged eight years, who died from injuries received some days ago by being run over at Eighth-avenue and Fourteenth-street, by a coach driven by MICHAEL HILL. The evidence showed that HILL was driving recklessly, and a verdict being rendered against him by five of the jurors, he was committed in default of $2,000 bail, to await the action of the Grand Jury.

JAMES FRENEY, alias Wm. Russell who was arrested in Petersburg, Va., on a charge of stealing $260 in bills and bonds and deeds of the value of $19,000, belonging to JAMES E. NOLAN, proprietor of the Woodbine saloon, was taken to Jefferson Market, yesterday, and locked up in default of bail in $1,000.

Mrs. CATHARINE KING, of No. 113 Greene-street, had her pocket picked of $37 in the Jefferson Market Police Court-room, yesterday morning. No arrest was made.

JANE MCCLOUD, keeper of a disreputable house, was before Justice COX, at Jefferson Market, yesterday, on a charge of sending indecent circulars to respectable persons. She was held in $500 bail to answer.

JOHN CURRAN, a shoemaker, was committed, in the Yorkville Police Court, yesterday, on a charge of stealing $36 worth of clothing from MAX HELMBOLD, of No. 870 Third-avenue.

Sports on the Ice.

Yesterday afternoon there was a lively base-ball match on the ice, at the Capitoline Lake, between the Prospect Park ten and the Capitoline ten, the result being the success of the "Caps," by a score of 22 to 15. The return match is to take place at Prospect Park, on Saturday, at 2 P. M. This afternoon the Packer Institute, Adelphi Academy, and Polytechnic Institute schools, of Brooklyn, will have a reception at the Capitoline Lake, given them by Messrs. WEED & DECKER.

THE TAMMANY THIEVES

How the Decision in Stokes' Case will Affect the Other Indictments.

An Important Question Raised—Was the Grand Jury Legally Constituted?—The Developments on the Stokes Trial.

TWEED AND STOKES.

Both in the Same Boat—An Important Question.

It is a rather remarkable fact, and one that has induced considerable comment among people immediately interested in the issues of the prosecutions against members of the late Tammany Ring, that TWEED and STOKES are equally interested in the decision of a legal point, and that the success of one is the success of the other. TWEED was FISK'S friend during the last three years of his life; their interests were identical, and together they were either to rise or fall; and now, less than two months after FISK'S death, TWEED'S fate, in a great measure, depends upon the issue of the trial of the Oyer and Terminer Grand Jury instituted by STOKES' counsel.

The special pleadings made on Wednesday by Mr. MCKEON aver that the drawing of the Grand Jury was illegally conducted, that gross irregularities were permitted in the revision of the names of the jurors, and that persons who solicited places on the Grand Jury were placed on the list and accepted. The witnesses which have thus far been produced by STOKES' counsel have been examined especially with reference to the manner of the drawing and the number of members of the Jury Commission who signed and indorsed the list, in order to show, if possible, that the law was not complied with. What is true of one Grand Jury as far as the mode of drawing is concerned, is true, they say, of the other, and no secret is made of the fact that if the Grand Jury of Oyer and Terminer is decided by the trial jury now sitting to have been illegally constituted, TWEED'S counsel will at once interpose the same pleading in their client's behalf. The singular circumstances of the case brought about a sharp discussion of the matter yesterday, and lawyers decided that JOHN GRAHAM, who is counsel for both TWEED and STOKES, was trying the trick of killing two birds with one stone, and seeking to insure TWEED'S safety while obtaining a delay for STOKES, for with the criminal indictment quashed it is maintained that there would be insuperable difficulties in the way of obtaining another indictment against TWEED.

Had the question of the legality of the Grand Jury no other bearing than that which it has on the indictment of STOKES, the District-Attorney would not have entered into a legal battle which must necessarily take much time and caused a vast amount of labor. It is conceded that under cover of the STOKES case a heavy Ring fight is being waged, the result of which seems to be doubtful to legal gentlemen of considerable acumen. It has been known since the pleading was made that the arguments of STOKES' counsel were in reality the inception of the defense of the Ring against the criminal indictments found by the General Sessions Grand Jury, and the elaborate preparation made to prove irregularities in the formation of the juries is designed rather to assist TWEED and his confreres than to prolong STOKES' life.

THE STOKES INDICTMENT.

The Trial of the Grand Jury Continued Yesterday—How It Was Constituted—Judges Ingraham and Barbur Tell What They Know About It.

The trial of "the preliminary question" regarding the legality of the indictment found by the Grand Jury of the Court of General Sessions against EDWARD S. STOKES, for the murder of JAMES FISK, JR., was resumed yesterday morning before Judge CARDOZO, in the Court of Oyer and Terminer. The prisoner, as usual, was represented by Messrs. GRAHAM, HARTLETT, GERRY and MCKEON, and the prosecution was conducted by District-Attorney GARVIN. STOKES was in attendance during the proceedings.

MR. GUMBLETON RECALLED.

Mr. GUMBLETON, Deputy County Clerk, was recalled, and said that list No. 1 of Grand Jurors contained, including the erasures, 670 names; there were sixteen erasures, leaving 653; the indorsement was 663; witness locked the ballot-box and kept the key in his pocket, but it might be possible for some one else to get at it; the Grand Jurors were drawn in open Court; he turned the wheel and drew the ballots; the ballots that remained were 399; the Petit Jury panels were drawn on the same day as the Grand Jury panels; was positive the ballots for Grand Jurors were not placed there later than the 10th of September; the County Clerk was not present at the drawing; had no special order of Court for the drawing, except for extra panel; had no order for any regular panel.

TESTIMONY OF CASPER C. CHILDS.

CASPER C. CHILDS testified, in reply to Mr. MCKEON: In am Deputy Commissioner of Jurors for this County for four years past; as a general thing I am in possession of the books and papers of the Department; you have already in your possession the minutes of the Grand Jurors of the 4th of September last; I have forty-two folks in my possession—half of each—the names of the available jurors and half the names of the exempt jurors; these are always in my possession, and have not been tampered with to my knowledge; in all there are from 2,000 to 30,000 names there.

Mr. MCKEON asked that the entire proceedings, the names of persons who made application to be admitted on the Grand Jury, and the gentlemen composing the Board, be admitted in evidence.

Judge CARDOZO held that the names of these gentlemen was not important to the record, as their existence was admitted to be legal, but the remainder of the application, he thought, should be granted.

WITNESS—These minutes are in the handwriting of the Commissioner; the numbers 663, I perceive, are in pencil, but I will not swear they are in his handwriting; I can't say that they bear any resemblance to it; I can tell by whom it was made; persons have requested me, perhaps in fifty instances, to be placed on the Grand Jury, and a large number of these, I believe, turned up on the list; other persons have requested the Commissioner to be placed on the jury, but not to a very large extent; I judged of a man's intelligence by his appearance and general deportment; where I had any doubt of a man's intelligence I invariably swore him; I can't point out one of these 662 names that I swore, for I never swear any but petit jurors; I did not receive notes from my friends or friends of the Commissioner asking to be put on; I can point out some who asked me; a large number of these 662 Grand Jurors were office-holders under the City Government.

Mr. GRAHAM—No man's life, under the present rotten Grand Jury system, is safe, for any man who has an enemy among the cabal of Ward politicians is liable to indictment at any moment.

WITNESS—I have no doubt that many members of the General Committee of Tammany Hall were on the Grand Jury, but that did not detract from their general character. We have both been on that Committee. There might be a discrepancy in the address and residences of jurors in the ballot and list by mistake of the clerk; I never compared the ballot and the list, nor did the Commissioner do it; that duty is discharged by the clerks; preachers, if they have any other business, can be put on the Grand Jury; I can't tell how the names of MAUNSELL B. FIELD and OLIVER DYER appear on the list of Grand Jurors.

TESTIMONY OF JUDGE INGRAHAM.

Judge INGRAHAM testified: In September, 1871, I received a notice to attend a meeting for the selection of the Grand Jurors; I was absent from the City when that meeting of September took place, and know nothing concerning it; I have doubted the propriety of a Judge of the Supreme Court attending these meetings, as in no way connected with the administration of justice, except in one case, when it was a matter of necessity; I was not present at any meeting to which you refer as that period, and have no official or other knowledge in regard to it.

TESTIMONY OF OLIVER DYER.

OLIVER DYER testified: I have examined the Grand Jury list of the City and County of New-York, filed 9th of September, 1871, and find my name there; my address is stated here to be No. 170 Nassau-street, now the Sun office; I have not resided in New-York since 1852; for the last six years my residence has been in Westchester; I have never served as a grand or petit juror in this City; I have never applied to be placed on the Grand Jury list, nor has any one applied for me; in July last, while in the office of the Mayor, he either told me he had placed my name on the Grand Jury list, or intended to do so.

Cross-examined by District-Attorney GARVIN—I asked the Mayor if he had the power to do so, and made no objection to it; my business has been in this City for a number of years.

TESTIMONY OF JUDGE BARBOUR.

Judge BARBOUR, Chief-Justice of the Superior Court, sworn, said: I have occupied my present position ten years; I attended the Board for the selection of jurors on the 4th of September, 1871; there was not a quorum present; Judge BEDFORD I think was there, but the Mayor was not; I have no impression as to the presence of any other member besides myself and Judge BEDFORD. He went away before I did, and I was compelled to adjourn the proceedings to the next day; Mr. DOUGLAS TAYLOR was present at the adjournment; I have no recollection of a recess being taken that day; before going to that meeting I had examined the statute of June, 1858, in relation to the selection of jurors; I had also examined the provisions of the act of 1870, but I don't remember how short a time previously; I was a member of this Board two years previously, and had carefully studied the duties I would be required to perform; I could not say I distinctly remembered all the provisions of the act of 1870; I have no doubt I understood my duties in regard to each act sufficiently well to enable me to perform them understandingly; on the following day I attended the adjourned meeting, when Mayor HALL, Recorder HACKETT and Judge BEDFORD were present; I was elected Chairman of the Board; I don't remember a list of persons desirous of being placed on the jury; if such a thing occurred I should have remembered it; according to my best recollection the minute to that effect is incorrect; if such a list was presented by the Commissioner of Jurors it was not presented to me; if it was presented at all I would have seen it; after my taking the chair there was some general conversation in relation to the character of present Grand Juries in comparison with former times; there was a committee appointed in relation to the selection of Grand Jurors, but I doubt if it was stated in the minute, that the resolution empowered the Committee to revise the Grand Jury list; I think it was not, but it is possible it was; I examined the jury list for about ten or fifteen minutes before the meeting; the formal proceedings took but a very short time; I attended the meeting on the 4th of September following and was present when the recess was taken; Mayor HALL, Judge BEDFORD, and Recorder HACKETT were present at the meeting; I can't state the number of grand jurors in the Special Committee reported by Mayor HALL and Judge BEDFORD, but they said it was over 600; I can't say which of the two reported it or that they stated whence they derived the names; they simply handed in a paper containing the names, which I read over; I made no comparison of that paper with the list of petit jurors of the City of New-York further than that I examined to see if the names of a few gentlemen I thought should be on the Grand Jury were there; if I mistake not, some names were stricken off and some were added; I could not say how many were stricken off, nor how many were added; some of the Judges objected to some names, and they were stricken off by running a pen through them; I cannot say whether this list now handed to me is the one which was then presented; my signature is attached to it, but it was not affixed then; before the adjournment it was agreed Mr. TAYLOR was to prepare a perfect copy of the list for signature; I did not examine the copy before I signed it; it was handed to me in the County Clerk's office by his deputy, I think, on the 9th of September; there was no other member of the Board present then; the Commissioner of Jurors was also absent.

The Court then adjourned to this morning.

BARNARD—CARDOZO.

The Judiciary Committee and the Work Before Them—Mode of Conducting the Investigation.

The members of the New-York Bar, in common with the thousands of people whose desire it is to see the Bench of the City purified, have waited with more than ordinary patience for the promised investigations into the careers of Judges BARNARD and CARDOZO, of the Supreme Court. It was expected that the Committee would have arrived in this City last night, and that the investigation would have been commenced this morning. Up to a late hour the Committee had not arrived, but Mr. TILDEN announced his intention to be in the City today, and the other members of the Committee will in all probability accompany him. As soon as possible after their arrival the Committee will commence work, and push the matter to an issue as rapidly as the character of the business will permit. It was at first intended to have the session open and give publicity to the transactions, but it was afterward decided that the sessions should be secret, in order that no obstacle should be thrown in the way of the Committee, during the investigation, and unless changes have very lately been made in the programme, neither of the Judges against whom charges have been preferred will be represented by counsel. It is claimed by the gentlemen who were instrumental in bringing about the investigation, that if the accused were allowed to introduce counsel, the matter would prove farcical, and any probable good which would otherwise result would be negatived.

The charges to be probed by the Judiciary Committee are the same that have been repeatedly recapitulated in newspapers; making decisions contrary to law, willful abuses of the judicial power, and persistent illegal distribution of the patronage of their offices. The Bar association have unlimited confidence in the members of the Judiciary Committee, and seem determined that no investigation prompted by other matters will be unearthed, of which nothing has yet come to light.

Canary's Street-Sprinkling Claim.

The claim of THOMAS CANARY for the sum of $15,000 for sprinkling certain streets—which claim is now before the Board of Audit—is made under a contract entered into last year, which made it obligatory on the contractor to sprinkle the streets between the 1st of June and the 31st of October last for the amounts named above. The following is a copy of the bill submitted to the Board of Audit: "Amount of work performed, dated June 1, 1871, for sprinkling with water, from June 1 to Oct 31, 1871, the following streets, avenues and lanes: One Hundred and Twenty-fifth-street, from Manhattan-street to Sixth-avenue and Eighth-avenue; from One Hundred and Twenty-fourth-street, from Fourth-avenue to Eighth-avenue; One Hundred and Thirty-second-street, from Sixth-avenue to Eighth-avenue and around Mount Morris-square, as per copy of agreement hereto annexed, together with the original certificate of the Superintendent of Streets and Commissioner of Public Works."

Ingersoll, Tweed, and Connolly.

The report of the whereabouts of INGERSOLL in yesterday's TIMES created a deal of gossip around the City Hall throughout the day, yesterday, and it was freely asserted that it cannot be many days now before he is in the hands of the officers of justice. Sheriff BRENNAN'S officers are still on the alert, and there is no reason why they should not soon capture their prisoner, now that his place of refuge has been discovered. TWEED and SWEENY were at their usual haunts throughout the day, and CONNOLLY was at his residence.

The City Advertising—Newspaper Publishers Looking for their Money.

A meeting of editors and publishers of newspapers took place yesterday at Sweeny's Hotel, to consider how they could obtain payment of their claims against the County and City of New-York for advertising. The following journals were represented: Evening Post, Evening Mail, German Demokrat, Eco d'Italie, Dispatch, Courier, Irish Republic, Sunday Democrat, Banner of Liberty, Sunburst, Irish Democrat, Scottish American Journal, Courier des Etats Unis, Irish People, Hebrew Leader, Irish World, American Celt, Mercantile Journal, Tablet and Era. After some discussion it was

Resolved, That the representatives of the Evening Post, Evening Mail, Daily Democrat (German), Sunday Courier, Irish Democrat, Banner of Liberty, Sunburst and Era be appointed a Committee, to which shall be referred the whole subject under discussion, with power to wait upon the Controller, ascertain his views, and take such other action as may be necessary in the premises.

A Novel Escape from Prison—The Doctor Outwitted.

It is the custom of the County Physician of Hudson County, N. J., to make a daily visit to the County Jail. On arriving there yesterday, he found CHARLES MURRAY, a prisoner held for burglary, ill, and an examination showed him to be suffering from small-pox. An ambulance was sent for, and MURRAY, who pretended to be too ill to walk, was lifted in. On arriving at the foot of the hill on Newark-avenue, MURRAY leaped out and ran through a meadow up the rocks to the top of the hill, and thence into Palisade-avenue. The ambulance attendant pursued him for a mile, but the patient made good his escape.

Payments to Charitable Institutions.

The Controller has made payments to the following-named charitable institutions of the amount of the arrearages due to them on account of the year 1871, viz.:

Childrens' Aid Society	$11,400 00
New-York Catholic Protectory	69,804 75
Institution for the Blind	4,365 42
Deaf and Dumb Asylum	4,866 24
Nursery and Child's Hospital	7,641 22
New-York Juvenile Asylum	24,680 84
Roman Catholic House of the Good Shepherd	13,478 77

Buckout, the Sleepy Hollow Murderer.

BUCKOUT was unable to sleep on Monday and Tuesday nights, which circumstance he attributed to a change made of his cell, and to taking some cough lozenges that contained a narcotic substance, which, instead of enabling him to sleep, caused him to be very restless. On Wednesday night he sl

UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT.

Before Judge Woodruff.

IMPORTANT DECISION—THE CASE OF THE BOSTON, HARTFORD AND ERIE RAILWAY COMPANY—THE CONFLICT OF JURISDICTION BETWEEN UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURTS IN BANKRUPTCY.

On the 21st of October, 1871, Seth Adams, a creditor of the Boston, Hartford and Erie Railroad Company, presented a petition in the United States District Court for the District of Massachusetts, alleging acts of bankruptcy on the part of the Company, and praying that it be adjudicated a bankrupt. On the 20th of December, James Alden, another creditor of the Company, presented a similar petition in the United States District Court of Connecticut, praying that the Company be adjudicated a bankrupt, and on Dec. 31 he presented another petition for the same purpose in the United States District Court for the Southern District of New-York. To all these three petitions the Company put in answers and resisted the applications. Pending proceedings on them, Adams applied to the District Courts in Connecticut and New-York for leave to intervene and oppose the petitions of Alden, on the ground that he (Adams) had prior rights in the matter. On the 28th of February, 1871, the Company withdrew its answers to each petition; and on March 2, the District Court of Massachusetts granted Adams' petition, adjudicated the Company a bankrupt, and issued a warrant for the distribution of the property among the creditors. By a supplementary petition, Adams presented this decree to the District Court of Connecticut, in support of his claim to stay proceedings on Alden's petition; but the Court disregarded the decree, dismissed the petition of Adams, and adjudicated the Company a bankrupt. Adams thereupon presented to the Circuit Court, in the September Term, (1871,) a petition of review, and argument being had, it was held that he was entitled to be heard in the District Court of Connecticut, and that his petition ought not to have been dismissed; and, in accordance with this decree, the Circuit Court ordered all proceedings in the Connecticut District Court to be stayed; and that the District Court of Massachusetts have exclusive jurisdiction in closing the estate of the Company. The like petition of Seth Adams was brought to a hearing in the United States District Court for the Southern District of New-York, on the 26th of February, 1871, and on the 27th that Court decided the petitioner had no standing at that stage of the proceedings. On application of counsel, reargument was allowed, which was had on the 2d of March, when the decree of the Massachusetts District Court was presented. The Court again refused to allow Adams to intervene, and the following facts appeared in the form of withdrawal by the Company, on the 28th of February, of its answer to Alden's petition, counsel for Alden delivered to the Judge an order adjudicating the Company a bankrupt. On March 1 he signed, and on the 3d, after the reargument, he delivered the order so signed to Alden's counsel, who had it entered on the records of the Court in the regular manner. The order was indorsed, "Filed March 1, 1871." Adams thereupon presented his petition to the Circuit Court, praying for review and reversal of said proceedings in District Court for the Southern District of New-York, and that all proceedings against the Company in said Court be stayed. In the course of a long and elaborate decision on this case, Judge Woodruff says: I have no hesitation in saying that the draft of an order, though signed, remaining in the sole possession and knowledge of the Judge, whether for the purpose of further consideration or any other reason, is subject to his control; it is not final so as to conclude him, and until it is in some manner notified to the Clerk of the Court, or to one of the parties, in such wise that his decision can properly be said to be promulgated or announced. The rehearing operated to take away any possible significancy in this respect to such private signing of such an order. The rehearing operates to open the decree for further examination, in whole or in part, according to the nature and extent of the grounds for rehearing. In regard to the conflict of jurisdiction between the District Courts, he says: It is unnecessary to repeat the observations which were made in deciding the very similar review of the proceedings between the same parties in the Circuit Court for the District of Connecticut, at the last September term of that Court.

In conclusion he says: It will be sufficient to reverse all proceedings subsequent to, and founded upon the adjudication of bankruptcy, (in the United States District Court for the Southern District of New-York,) and stay all further proceedings of such District Court.

Doyle, agent.

The Yorkville Arson Case—Confession of One of the Prisoners.

ANTHONY O. JONES and WM. CIESKI, who are charged with setting fire to the apartments of the latter in Sixty-second-street, were fully committed by Justice COULTER in the Yorkville Police Court yesterday, and were taken to the Tombs. The prisoner CIESKI yesterday made additional confessions to Officer REINISCH, of the Fire Marshal's office, as follows:

That when the fire occurred in his place at Clinton-street, on the 26th of March, 1871, ANTHONY O. JONES sent him and family up to Haverstraw, and during his (CIESKI'S) absence set fire to the store; that he was then insured for $800, and received a check of $400 for his loss from the Company, which JONES went and cashed for him, and then deducted his share for his trouble. After the fire he (CIESKI) moved to Morris-avenue, in Elizabeth, N. J., where JONES procured $1,000 insurance for him, and on the 4th of July, 1871, sent him, CIESKI, and his family over to New-York to view the fireworks at the City Hall, and in his absence JONES fired his place in Elizabeth. He then received a check for $800, with which JONES did in the same way as before. CIESKI then moved his shop to No. 109 Prince-street, New-York, and his residence to the corner of North Fourth and Fourth streets, Williamsburg. JONES went to CIESKI'S wife one day in November, 1871; sent her to Washington Market, and the two children to his shop, and when they were all away fired this place also; CIESKI was insured in the above place for $1,000. On setting with the insurance companies he received a check for $500, which was cashed by JONES, who took his share this time in the same manner as before, by counting the money when handed to him, and taking part of it, giving the remainder to CIESKI. He further stated that JONES not long ago told him that in December last a fire occurred in a lounge factory in Eldridge-street. The place was occupied by a companion of his, whose name he does not know. JONES said he induced this man to take a book-keeper for a few days, then go to Philadelphia, and while there he would fire the place for him, which he said he did at 2 o'clock in the morning.

Damages Against a Horse Railroad Company.

On Feb. 4, 1871, a horse-car on the Pavonia line, Jersey City, in descending the heavy curve and declivity over Bergen Tunnel, attained such a speed as to fall over the edge of the hill, a distance of twenty feet. Several persons were injured, and on Wednesday Mr. MONTGOMERY, one of the passengers, commenced a suit against the Company, laying his damages at $10,000. The case was yesterday concluded, the jury giving $1,500 damages. As soon as this case was concluded, that of ADAM SCHICK, another one of the injured passengers, was taken up. He had been confined by his injuries for three months, and the jury gave him a verdict for $2,000.

THURSDAY, Feb. 15—P. M.

The sales of Gold today were nearly all at 110¼ ₱ cent. The trade demand for Customs and to buy Exchange continues large at the going rate, but speculation in the Gold Room is comparatively tame. The rates of Exchange are scarcely as stiff as yesterday. Sales of 60 days London at 109½ ₱ cent., less a brokerage, and short sight 110@110¼ ₱ cent. The London telegrams were delayed until late in the day, but when received they reported steady prices for the English and American Funds, and no change in the Bank of England rate of Interest.

Money, through the forenoon, was easy at 6@7 ₱ cent. on call loan to the Brokers, but after 2 o'clock the demand was apparently increased, and 7 ₱ cent. the prevailing rate.

On the Stock Exchange the Public Funds were again very firm and on limited offerings of the 5 ₱ cents, old as well as new, and of the 5-20s of 1867. The offerings of all 5-20s to the Sinking Fund at the Treasury amounted to $3,170,000, of which $1,000,000 was accepted at 108.73 to 109.39 ₱ cent. and accrued Gold Interest. The Southern State Bonds were quiet; South Carolinas steadier, and Tennessees a fraction weaker. There was nothing new in the Railway Mortgages. In the Share speculation the temper of the market was rather indifferent, and the actual business quite moderate. The inclination of prices was, as usual, on a dull feeling, to lower figures, a notable exception being on the cash deliveries of Hannibal and St. Joseph (old) Stock, considerable amounts of which were bought in under the rule for failure to deliver within prescribed hours. The sales of the day were all the way from 43 to 47½ ₱ cent., while time contracts were put out on the presumption that the 50,000 new shares will be made a good delivery in 30 days, at 39 ₱ cent. The affair continues to excite much more comment, and generally of a very indignant nature, than the extent of the outstanding interest in the Stock would seem to call for, but the truth is the Street is growing tired of such brazen transactions, and have less toleration for the bad men, (yet surviving,) who for the past three or four years have brought scandal upon the Exchange by organizing conspiracies in Gold and in the Money Market, as well as fraud upon Railway and other corporate property.

In the Afternoon the market was generally weaker than at the Boards on the Western Stocks, and the feeling was extremely dull. The following quotations were made, as compared with Wednesday night:

The following Resolutions of the Governing Committee of the Stock Exchange were read to the Board of the Exchange this morning, and more than confirm the unofficial conclusions of the Committee, to which we referred yesterday. It will be observed that the second Resolution is most emphatic in reference to a satisfactory registry for the Stock, which, being plainly interpreted, means that the banking concern up-town, of no enviable reputation under the exploded Tammany Ring, and now in the more complete control, since the New Year, of the Erie Ring, known as the Tenth National Bank, will not be recognized, at the end of 30 days, or at any other time, (under such auspices,) as "a satisfactory" place of registry. We have reason to believe that this determination will be adhered to. The Committee of the Exchange, and the prevailing sentiment of Wall-street, are in no humor today to recognize the validity or good faith or honest purpose of the sudden issue of 50,000 shares of new Stock of the Smith-Gould administration of the Hannibal and St. Joseph Company, in any way, and all threats or intimations, or actual proceedings of a legal or judicial nature, to compel the use of the new Certificates, as a good delivery on outstanding or future contracts in the Original Stock, will go for nothing on the New-York Stock Exchange. The case may have been different with the stupendous frauds upon the Erie Stock, periodically overissued ad libitum, from 72½ ₱ cent. down to 22 ₱ cent., but the Ring then controlled more Judges, and the patience of the public, though sorely tried, was less nearly exhausted.

Resolved, That by the resolution of Jan. 31, 1872, adopted by the Governing Committee, to wit: "That until the transfer-books of the Hannibal and St. Joseph Railroad Company have been reopened, and the stock duly registered in accordance with the rules of the Stock Exchange, no stock shall be a good delivery except such as have been already issued and countersigned at the office of DUNCAN, SHERMAN & Co.," it entered into and became a part of the contract of the members of this Exchange from that date.

Resolved, That the selection of the place of registry made by the Hannibal and St. Joseph Railroad Company is not satisfactory to the Governing Committee, and that the Hannibal and St. Joseph Railroad Company be notified that the new issue of their stock will not be dealt in by the Exchange until after thirty days' notice of said issue has been given, and a satisfactory registry has been established; and that meanwhile no certificates shall be a good delivery in settlement of contracts except those countersigned by DUNCAN, SHERMAN & CO., transfer agents, and issued prior to numbers 2,434 for common stock, and 2,832 for preferred stock.

The New-York Times.

The utmost care will be devoted to gathering political news from special sources during the Presidential canvass. This department of the paper will be unusually full and trustworthy. Renewed enterprise will be exhibited in every department of the paper, and large space will be devoted to reports of speeches made during elections, or on other important political occasions.

A very full summary of news, and many genera articles of great interest, are published in the Semi-weekly editions; and in the Weekly edition there is an unabridged report of the proceedings at the Farmers' Club, an excellent summary of political information, and a great variety of matter suitable for family reading.

The NEW-YORK TIMES is pre-eminently a family paper, all objectionable advertisements being rigidly excluded; and it has a constantly increasing circulation among the most respectable classes of the community.

The recommendation of a Committee of the Bar Association, that the present system of fees to officers connected with the Courts should be changed, and in some instances abolished, merits praise. Long ago we called attention to the flagrant impositions in the Sheriff's office, and urged then that the practice of feeing these officials for doing only their sworn duty should be done away with. Every lawyer knows that it is a practice prolific of fraud and oppression. Mr. ROELKER, of the above-mentioned Committee, cited some instances of the impudent extortions of Deputy Sheriffs. In the case of an attachment, where the legal fee was fifty cents, a bill was presented for $10 69, and the Deputy modestly requested $20 additional for his personal services. Where a vessel had been in charge of the Sheriff only two or three days, a bill was rendered for $750, and cut down by the Court to $72 25. A still more glaring instance of rapacity was that of a person who had to pay $1,400 to stay out of jail for one night. These are only samples of outrages of daily occurrence. The whole system of fees in these offices is wrong and demoralizing, and ought not to be tolerated an instant longer. Our Reform Legislature will make no slight addition to its claims on public gratitude if it shall relieve lawyers and litigants of this most unjust and oppressive burden.

People who think that the Erie Ring ought to be held beyond "legislative interference" are respectfully referred to the speech of Hon. MATTHEW HALE on the Classification bill. It will be found in another column, and is good reading for persons who have signed JAY GOULD'S petitions. A capital and debt increased over sixty-five millions; a net income reduced from four per cent. to 13-100 of one per cent.; nearly fifty millions charged to an account closed ten years ago, for items fully covered by other charges; together with a weary list of violations of law and justice—these are some of the counts of Mr. HALE'S indictment. The most important fact in this connection is that these things have been notorious for months, and yet a bill to put a stop to some of the worst of them hangs in Committee, and waits the arguments of Erie lawyers.

TWEED and SWEENY made some little political capital out of certain advances which they claimed to have made to liquidate pay-rolls of men employed in the Department of Public Works and of Parks. At the last meeting of the Board of Audit, a claim was presented by the Tenth National Bank on account of the identical pay-rolls which TWEED made believe he had paid out of his private purse. Claims were previously filed by the same bank to cover advances made on the pay-rolls for the settlement of which SWEENY got a very cheap reputation for generosity. It is really becoming doubtful if the disreputable career of these men was ever varied by a single act of disinterested bounty. Their consistent course of lying and cheating appears to have been followed in regard to their charities, as well as in appropriating other people's money.

There is some prospect that a vote will be reached in the Assembly, today, on the charter of the Committee of Seventy. We trust that the members of that body fully appreciate the importance of the action they are about to take. It will substantially decide the question whether the Legislature can be depended on to carry out the views of the people in regard to the reform of the monstrous abuses in the government of this City. The charter of the Committee is warmly approved by the community at large. It has the indorsement of the Regular Republican Committee. It is absolutely without a competitor worthy of the name, for we cannot regard the mongrel device of "TOM" STEWART, introduced by Mr. MACKAY, as deserving attention. Above all, it is a sound plan in itself, and promises to secure to the minority party in the City, a just share in the control of its affairs. Less the Legislature should not consent to. More it could only grasp for the moment, to lose it again as surely and completely as the system of Albany Commissions was lost. Apart from considerations of pure public interest, the Committee's charter should commend itself with special strength to a "Republican Legislature."

The claims against England for special damages, arising out of the depredations of particular vessels, are estimated roundly to amount to $20,000,000. The claims for indirect damages are estimated to amount to about $2,000,000,000—more, as has been pointed out, than Germany exacted from France after a bloody war and a complete conquest. People here generally smile when the last little bill is mentioned. The common remark is, "Nobody ever expected that to be paid." Every man mentions it with a broad grin. That being so, is it not a pity to see a good Treaty lost for the sake of a fictitious claim? Is there no way of meeting this difficulty? Surely this is a case, if there ever was one, in which a little diplomatic skill might wisely be exercised. Is it too late to save a Treaty which promised so much for the future peace of the world?

Making Fish of One and Flesh of Another.

Readers of the Tribune must have observed the pertinacity with which it has demanded the punishment of Mr. TERWILLIGER, who received a sum rather less than $5,000, in two years, as commissions on public printing, in pursuance of a bad custom. Mr. TERWILLIGER has resigned his position as Clerk of the Senate, and the custom which he followed will probably be abolished—at least we hope so. But we must frankly say—at the risk of being called "liars and thieves" by a distinguished public writer, who shields big rogues while denouncing small ones—that it affords us no pleasure to see a gentleman of excellent character, of good abilities, and hitherto much esteemed by a large circle of friends, compromised in any way—but especially in such a way as this. The sum paid to Mr. TERWILLIGER—little over $2,000 a year—is contemptible; it would not corrupt a doorkeeper. Mr. TERWILLIGER was told that it was part of the just "perquisites" of his office. "Dustoorie" had always been paid, and Mr. TERWILLIGER would have been thought very eccentric had he refused to take it. But for all that, the custom is a vile one, and should be swept away. Mr. TERWILLIGER has been sacrificed by his indiscretion, and we are not aware that he has asked anybody to say a word for him.

But now we specially wish to call the attention of the public to the extreme meanness and dishonesty of the Tribune in relation to such cases as this. It has hounded down Mr. TERWILLIGER, who received $4,800 in two years in pursuance of a bad custom. But it is all but totally silent about HANK SMITH, Police Commissioner and Fenton lobbyist, who appears to have been concerned in cheating the poor depositors of the Bowling-green Savings Bank out of tens of thousands of dollars. Is it because Mr. GREELEY lent his own name to support this rotten bank that he tries to cover up the acts of SMITH? Mr. GREELEY is not a child, although he has found it very profitable in the rural districts to dress himself for that "part," and to look as meek and innocent as if he had never done a mean or contemptible act in his life. He must admit, in his own mind, although he may try to bamboozle the public on the subject, that it is far worse for a man to swindle poor laboring people out of their hard savings than for another man to take $4,800 in two years as "Commissions" on printing.

Yet, what has GREELEY to say to his bedfellow politician, HANK SMITH? The other day he addressed a few words of mild remonstrance to SMITH, by way of keeping up appearances. This is one of the tricks which he knows so well how to practise. But he has never called for SMITH'S resignation as Police Commissioner. He has never even published the full and official particulars of SMITH'S complicity with a vast fraud. No—he thinks it quite right that a man who is himself charged with a serious offence should remain at the head of a force designed to thrust swindlers into jail. HORACE GREELEY'S own name was coupled with SMITH'S in the Bowling-green Savings Bank—"innocently," he says. Every suspicious act in which he is caught out is done "innocently." Never did the public forgive so much to any man as it does to HORACE GREELEY, or believe in the purity of a man's motives for the sole reason that he wears short trowsers tucked into his boots. But HANK SMITH cannot hope to enjoy a similar dispensation. If he is not a rogue himself, he has allowed rogues to run off with the money of the hard-working men whom he lured to his ricketty bank. He permitted loans to be made to persons who cannot be found, to the amount of $69,023 38. To his personal friends, and those of his co-directors, $31,010 63 more was lent, and that account is now pronounced by the receiver to be "worthless." Altogether, $238,564 70 was made away with during the time SMITH was President of the Bank.

Put this sum by the side of the amount TERWILLIGER received, and discriminate properly between the two transactions, and which man—SMITH or TERWILLIGER—would seem to be most deserving of punishment? The Tribune has devoted columns of turgid rant to TERWILLIGER'S offense, and one little paragraph to the wicked and cruel frauds of the broken bank. In the same way it praised SWEENY as a man of "towering spirit," and tried to make out that A. OAKEY HALL was an honest man. Yet it has the assurance to pretend that it is working for "reform"—such reform as Senator FENTON, whose character for honesty has always been beyond reproach, can suggest. Some people say that there are policemen in our force who are not a bit more honest than they should be. What right have we to expect them to be otherwise, with the example of HANK SMITH before them? After all, SMITH may plead that he is only following in the course which his political chief, Senator FENTON, set him some years ago. Like master like man.

The question now to be settled is, can HANK SMITH be allowed to insult the public by remaining on the Police Commission? That question is one which will not be allowed to sink out of sight. The Tribune cannot save HANK SMITH, any more than it could save SWEENY or HALL. If the Police force cannot rid the City of swindlers, we must at least see that it is not governed by them.

Sectarian Schools.

Some remarkable statistics, carefully gathered by the Council of Political Reform, are presented in another column, showing the prodigious extent to which the Roman Catholic Church in this State, in various forms, has gained possession of charitable funds appropriated by the State or City of New-York. Thus, out of seventy-three private charitable institutions, located in this City, under the control of religious denominations, receiving public aid to the aggregate amount of $688,084, fifty-five are Roman Catholic, to which the appropriations amount to the enormous proportion of $641,433—leaving only some $47,000 to the Protestant institutions, of which the "Protestant Episcopal" receive the largest share—namely $20,516.

Again, out of the 116 private charitable institutions in other cities of the State, under control of religious denominations, and receiving State aid, 110 were Roman Catholic, and obtaining, as appropriation, $240,332 out of the whole amount, $255,054; leaving to the Protestant institutions about $15,000, of which the Baptists obtained the largest share—$7,211. Still further, in this City, 112 Roman Catholic church schools, with 52,009 pupils, are aided by the State, while of the Protestant sects there are only 16 schools, with about 6,000 pupils, thus aided, (of which the Episcopal embrace 4,650,) and the 18 non-denominational schools only include 15,722 pupils.

Another interesting fact will also be gathered from these statistics, that while the Protestant and the non-denominational charities and week-day schools receive such small amounts from the State, they always supplement it with very large private contributions, thus to a certain degree compensating the State for its aid. On the other hand, the Roman Catholic charities almost live on the public support, receiving very little in private contributions—thus throwing nearly the whole burden of their support upon the State or City authorities. This contrast is strikingly shown in such charities as the Protestant House of Refuge of this City, and the Catholic Protectory for destitute children, each sheltering nearly the same number of children, and the former receiving only about $48,000 from the State and City, while the latter obtained this year—if we are correctly informed—$240,000.

It was time, evidently, that this endowment of a "State Church" should cease. What with appropriations to church schools and gifts of lands to churches, the Roman Catholic Church of this City enjoys an enormous support from the general public. No Protestant of liberal mind begrudges a moderate public aid to well-proved Catholic charities, which lessen wide-spread public evils. The policy of the State is to supplement such private and useful undertakings, whether under one sect or another, or under none, by a reasonable public assistance, on the ground that the public evils they are designed to relieve are thus more economically and thoroughly cured. It will be seen from our Albany letter, that the sectarian appropriation clause in the charter has been struck out. The condition in which the subject is left will deserve discussion on another occasion.

Foolish Companies.

Our attention has been repeatedly called of late to the fact that the National Insurance Convention was of inestimable service to the insurance companies, in that it put the vast interests of the system on a substantial and equable basis. Having our own opinions about the incalculable benefits of this Convention, we do not care to go into an extended discussion of them, except in one particular. We refer especially to the proposed law regulating investments, &c., and the uniform blank for annual statements, which was claimed to be the crowning glory of that Convention. We may be mistaken, but we think that the corporations who have during the past week been so ready to go upon the stand and testify to Mr. MILLER'S beneficent control over them, have hardly comprehended the full scope of these two important instruments, or they would have hesitated a little before giving vent to the exuberance of their gratitude. There are ugly rumors in the air to the effect that the law was cooked a little (à la Tammany) after it had passed from the hands of the Committee into the pocket of the Chairman ad interim, (Mr. MILLER,) and that a certain prominent life insurance President assisted the culinary process. The law as it stands is onerous and restrictive in its provisions, to an extent that was certainly never contemplated by the Convention, and it puts into the hands of the Superintendent a power that no State official can safely hold.

The uniform blank is worth the careful consideration of at least nine-tenths of the companies in this State, who will be driven into insolvency if it is strictly adhered to. Perhaps these astute corporations have not yet discovered that these two documents were deliberately and carefully devised by Mr. MILLER and his coadjutors for the purpose of crowding them out of the business—but if they are sanctioned by the Legislature, they are in a fair way to discover it when they come to answer the requirements, and balance their books. In fact, the law and the blank were intended to be the upper and nether millstones, between which all the younger and weaker companies were to be ground to powder, while the Miller was to be retained at his post at Albany, facilitate the grinding, and take his toll. Now we have no especial sympathy for the companies who are thus to be bolted and winnowed out of existence—they have disregarded our warnings, and would take none of our advice; but we have decided objections to allowing the State machinery to be used for this grinding process, and that is precisely what Mr. MILLER'S friends were trying to accomplish when they circulated their white-washing testimonial, hoping, by its powerful aid, to stave off an investigation, which has come at last, and developed a state of things that every honest man must contemplate with anxiety and disgust.

A correspondent, in our Saturday issue, speaks of the injury to the business resulting from Mr. MILLER'S corrupt administration. The extent of that injury can never be fully estimated. Let it once come to be fully understood that this official is sustained and encouraged by the very companies who have been paying him illegal and extortionate fees or douceurs, and the sympathy which at one time was freely accorded to them by the public, when it was supposed that they were in his power, will change to a sentiment that is already gathering force and manifesting itself on the registers of several of these corporations. "Paid-up policies," "lapsed policies," "receiverships" and "reinsured risks," are ominous signs in the insurance horizon. There are audible signs of discontent from the deep recesses of directors' rooms when the question of paying dividends is met by the unanswerable logic of no divisible surplus, and from agents far and near come letters that are not enlivening as to the prospects of the business if Mr. MILLER remains at its head.

The truth is slowly coming to the comprehension of some of the shrewd ones in the profession that if they desire better times, they must throw overboard this political Jonah, who endangers their craft, and threatens to send them all to the bottom. The stupid ones will probably wait until their next election of officers, and learn by the loss of their own heads what they have gained by trying to protect Mr. MILLER'S.

More Light—The New Gas.

New-York has had so thorough a trial of bad light and dear light that she should rejoice over the prospect of a change for the better. There may be delay, and perhaps we should say must be. The power of selfish corporations is not beaten down all at once. In fact the very improvement we are about describe, although warmly advocated by NAPOLEON III., the gas monopolists of Paris were able up to this year to stave off. Knowing this, and knowing what that improvement is, we ought to be able to profit by the example.

On the 1st of January, 1872, the Place du Nouvel Opera was lighted up in a way that excited universal admiration in Paris, and has been one of the lions of that capital ever since. The illumination proceeded from a new material called "oxhydrique gas." It is a mixture of hydrogen and oxygen, and is said to possess almost immeasureable advantages over the gas now in use. In the first place its light is almost incomparably superior in both degree and steadiness. It is "as brilliant as the light emitted by an electrical battery, without the unsteady flicker, and diffused, divergent rays." The moment it is lighted in the square named, which faces the Rue de la Paix and borders the gorgeous façade of the new Opera-house, "all the surrounding lights assume a murky, struggling look." The illumination is calm, soft, and far-reaching like that of a full moon in a clear sky, and gives quite a fairy look to that "huge piece of fancy confectionery," the edifice mentioned. No prospectus, we are assured, is needed to establish the vast superiority of the new gas over the old. This is instantly manifest. But, apart from the advantage visible to the eye, other advantages set forth by the patentees, MM. MARECHAL and DU MOTAY well deserve examination. The latter may be described as follows:

The new gas is healthier than the old, since it neither consumes the surrounding atmosphere nor deposits oxide of carbon. It is cheaper, since two parts of hydrogen mixed with one part of oxygen go further than sixteen parts of the former in its simple state. A substantial proof of this is offered in the fact that the patentees offer to light Paris at the rate of fifty centimes the cubic metre, instead of four francs, eighty centimes, which is what the Municipality have been in the habit of paying. One small burner will brilliantly illuminate a large ball-room. Ordinary print can be read by such a burner at a distance of sixty feet. The gas is easily adapted to private houses. It is entirely clean and without smell. These are certainly great advantages, and, supposing the account of them to be strictly correct, which we have no reason to doubt, it would seem that the "oxhydrique gas" must come into universal use. It appears that the Ex-Emperor NAPOLEON III. was determined to bring this about in Paris. Before his fall he ordered experiments to be made in front of the Hotel de Ville, the Palais Royal, and over the marble arch in the Place du Carousel. But the powerful gas company moved heaven and earth to interpose obstacles, and might have prevented the innovation to this day, but that the patentees were adroit enough to effect a "fusion" with the old monopoly, which will help the eyes of the public, and add to the security of their persons if it does not, in the proportion suggested above, lessen the tax on their pockets.

Every rose has its thorn, and there are drawbacks to even the superlative merits of the "oxhydrique." In the first place there is a certain amount of danger attending its use, although this can be absolutely neutralized by simple and easy precautions. Thus, it is said to be necessary to convey the two gases to the burner by separate pipes. But they must be allowed to mix before the match is applied, as otherwise an explosion is to be feared. It would seem that this difficulty could be obviated by a choice of mechanical contrivances, arranged so that the gases might be mingled just before coming to the burner, and without loss by escape. Another point is that the apparatus is otherwise slightly more complicated. A small cylinder has to be placed within the burner, composed of lime or of calcined magnesia. On this the flame caused by the ignition of the two gases has to be projected. The extra complication is, of course, objectionable. Still, the expense being in any case so much less than that of the old gas, the objection is comparatively trifling. Whatever the difficulties attending the use of the "oxhydrique," the assurances of the patentees appear to be verified in practice. Several of the Paris theatres are already lighted with it, the large hotels are arranging for its introduction, and it has superseded common gas in the office of the Gaulois.

The imperfect lighting of our streets is a direct temptation to crime, and outrages are reported daily that the perpetrators would never have hazarded but for the darkness. When a man can commit an assault or a robbery with almost the certainty that he cannot be subsequently identified, and when his surprised victim cannot use his eyes in his defense, it must be owned that the incentives to such deeds are sadly increased. If our streets were properly lit, instead of being in almost total darkness, garrotting and other nocturnal atrocities would be greatly diminished. Other benefits to be derived from the improvement are manifest. Better and steadier light in doors, whether in public or private buildings, would prove of infinite help to the eyes, and, if what is claimed for the new gas be true, for the lungs also. The gas companies of New-York have done their worst for the people during a long time past with remorseless persistency, and, should the "oxhydrique" prove their Nemesis, few but themselves will regret it. The Parisian successes of the new agent are, at all events, sufficient to justify its trial, and we hope the enterprise and capital for this will be forthcoming at an early day. We should thus get rid of shameless monopolists like the Metropolitan Gas Company.

A Curious Murder Trial.

A cause lately tried in London excited for the time an interest little less than that felt in the Tichborne case. CHRISTIANA EDMUNDS, aged forty-three, was arraigned for the murder of SIDNEY BARKER. The prisoner resided with her mother at Brighton, and had formed acquaintance with a Dr. BEARD, for whom she conceived a somewhat too tender regard. In September, 1870, she gave Mrs. BEARD a chocolate cream, and that lady suffered so acutely after eating it, that she told her husband she was convinced it was poisoned. This circumstance might have passed off without further notice, but before long other cases of illness occurred after people had eaten creams and sweetmeats which came, or purported to come, from the shop of a Mr. MAYNARD. On June 12, 1871, CHAS. MILLER bought some chocolate creams at MAYNARD'S. He ate one, and gave his nephew, SIDNEY BARKER, another. MILLER was attacked with sickness and rigidity. His nephew died. This packet of chocolate was thrown away, but subsequently another was purchased and handed to an eminent analyst. He found that the creams contained strychnine. An inquest was held, a verdict of accidental death recorded, and Mr. MAYNARD was exonerated from all blame. After the inquest he destroyed his stock.

Miss EDMUNDS had previously called on MAYNARD, and told him that his candies contained poison, and that a friend of hers had nearly died from eating them. It appeared that the prisoner was in the habit of sending boys, whom she found playing in the streets, to buy sugar-plums and chocolate creams from MAYNARD'S. She would say that these were not quite what she required, and would return what appeared to be those just received, but were, in fact, others which she had infected with poison. The boy returned to MAYNARD, who poured back into the jars those which Miss EDMUNDS had returned, and sent her another packet, with which she professed to be satisfied, and which in turn she duly strychnined.

More than this, she left about on shop counters and other places, as though by accident, bags bearing MAYNARD'S name, containing the poisoned sweetmeats. When the boy BARKER died, anonymous letters were addressed to his father, urging him most strongly to prosecute MAYNARD, and there was strong evidence to show that such letters were in the handwriting of the prisoner. The weight of evidence was so entirely against her that her counsel proceeded to set up the defense of insanity, and this is, legally considered, the importance of the case, for it will probably become an oft-quoted precedent in our own Courts as well as in England. The evidence in support of the plea of insanity was very strong. The chaplain of the jail in which she was confined prior to the trial, who had been chaplain of a lunatic asylum, and is a person of experience in such cases, was decidedly of opinion that she was demented. Dr. WOOD, formerly resident at another great asylum, believed her really incapable of judging between right and wrong. Dr. ROBERTSON, one of the visitors of the Court of Chancery to Lunatics, regarded her "as one of those persons on the border land between crime and insanity." He thought her intellect quite clear and free from any delusion, but that she was "morally insane." Dr. MANDSLEY, an eminent man, agreed with Dr. ROBERTSON.

There was yet another witness:

"Seldom," writes one present, "has there been witnessed a more painful scene in court than that caused by the appearance of Mrs. EDMUNDS, the mother of the prisoner, in the witness-box. The unhappy lady, who had all the look of extreme old age, was for a long time unable to speak for her sobs. There was something inexpressibly pitiable in the story of her life, as she gasped it out in sentences broken with tears; how her father, whose name she begged not to be asked to tell, had died an epileptic cripple; how her husband had gone mad in the prime of life, and died a raving lunatic; how her only son had been an idiot from his childhood, and had at last to be sent to Earlswood to die; how her eldest daughter had attempted to commit suicide, and had died a victim of hysteria; how the prisoner, the child 'whom everybody who knew her loved,' had suffered from paralysis and hysteria; and how she herself had watched stealing over her the symptoms of the hereditary malady so fatal to her race, until this last horror had come upon the end of a life of misery. All this was wrung from the wretched mother by questions gently and kindly put, but yet to answer each one of which was to her mortal agony. And in the midst of it all there came a response, a sort of wailing cry from the dock—'This is more than I can bear.' No counsel can be justified in leaving his case incomplete; yet, if a sudden inspiration had led Serjeant PARRY to close his case as Mrs. EDMUNDS was led from the witness-box, it is doubtful whether any verdict but that of not guilty on the plea of insanity could possibly have been returned. Unfortunately the succeeding evidence weakened if it did not destroy, the powerful impression caused by the widowed mother's story of her own and her child's life. That story bore the impress of truth, and yet the corroborating evidence was singularly weak, and at the close of the case for the defense the impression left upon the Court was that the plea of insanity had not been made out as forcibly as had been expected from the opening speech."

The jury brought in a verdict of guilty, unaccompanied by any recommendation to mercy, and the Judge expressed his concurrence with it. But the Home Secretary has altered the sentence, and Miss EDWARDS goes to a prison for life.

Necessity of Police Discipline.

A Coroner's jury yesterday decided that the waiter COSTELLO, who so grievously wounded the notorious JACK GLASS, a few weeks ago, was guilty of his death; and the prisoner was remanded to await the action of the Grand Jury. This procedure is, of course, quite right and proper; but it should be remembered that, had a certain member of the Police force performed his duty as an officer, GLASS would now probably be alive. It will be remembered that, in the TIMES' account of the affray, mention was made of an officer who grossly neglected his duty, and left the two men to settle their fierce quarrel as best they might. This Police officer must have known that GLASS was a ruffian, and that the language he used toward COSTELLO would ultimately lead to a breach of the peace. Yet, when asked to inform the officer on post that his services were required, this as yet unknown guardian of the peace replied, "Oh, settle matters quietly," a piece of advice COSTELLO was not slow to follow. The regulations of the Police Department explicitly state that no member of the force is ever off duty. In uniform or out of uniform, on post or off post, he is always an officer, and must respond to all proper calls for assistance on the part of citizens. But here was an officer who had only just been relieved from patrol duty, and was still in uniform, yet he declined to act in a case of apparent need, and left two passionate and vengeful men to settle their differences at the point of a knife. He heard GLASS make dire threats against COSTELLO, and must have known that the ruffian would probably keep his word—yet, though sworn to protect life and property, the officer ran away from his duty, and a murder was the immediate consequence. A proper degree of discipline would have instructed this officer that his duty in such a case was to see that GLASS left the saloon before any violence was used, and that the quarrel was not renewed. Had he done so, the murdered man would have been spared his fate, and COSTELLO escaped the anxiety and anguish he now suffers. We have often alluded to the laxity of discipline in the Police Department, under the present Board of Commissioners, though the present instance is the most glaring that has ever been noticed—one man in his grave, and another in prison awaiting his fate, and all because a policeman was either too cowardly or too careless to perform his duty.

MINOR TOPICS.

The European Governments are becoming nervous as to the Pope's successor. Nearly all the present members of the College of Cardinals are Italians, favorable to ultramontanism, and pressure has for some time past been brought to bear on the Papal Government to bestow the Cardinal's hat on the representatives of other countries. Probably the recent indisposition of His Holiness has strengthened the desire to see this done. It is said that a consistory for the election of fifteen Cardinals will be held next month.

The Spanish authorities are at open war with the Internationalists, whose proceedings, and the policy to be pursued in regard to them, occupied so much of the time of the Cortes before Christmas. Señor SAGASTA, the Prime Minister, has issued instructions to the forty-nine provincial Governors, to the effect that the meetings of the association in question are not to be permitted, and, if necessary, forcible means are to be employed to prevent them. By the present constitution it is not necessary to have permission to hold a meeting, but it is ordered that notice thereof must be given to a certain officer. Lately the Internationalists in Madrid gave the required notice, when the civil Governor sent an intimation that the meeting could not be permitted. The Internationalists assert that he is exceeding his powers, and have brought an action at law to test them.

Capt. EDWARD A. CHAPEL, of Hudson, in this State, according to the Evening Register, is anxious to accept the offer of ten thousand dollars recently made by Lady FRANKLIN, as a reward for the recovery of the records of the expedition which was headed by her late husband. The Captain being an old Arctic explorer, is not incumbered by any unnecessary enthusiasm. He looks at the matter entirely from a business point of view, and thinks that an association of eleven men, including himself, could each clear a handsome sum by the enterprise. This idea would involve the fitting out of a whaling-ship at an expense of $24,000. Instead of taking a corps of scientific explorers, he would procure a stout crew, and act as leader of the expedition himself. Until his arrival at the head of Repulse Bay, he would devote himself entirely to whaling. From that point he would return home with the oil, leaving the ship behind to refit for the second voyage. On rejoining her, he would move toward the south and south-western portions of King William's Land, where he firmly believes the records of the ill-fated expedition may be found. Capt. CHAPEL has already spent five Winters in the Arctic regions. As an evidence of his sincerity, he expresses a willingness to make a personal contribution of four thousand dollars, but declines altogether to be assisted either by gifts from the benevolent or subsidies from the Government.

During the past few months, Virginians have suffered so much from the persecutions of creditors that they begin to lose hope of being able finally to overcome their difficulties. According to the present State law, homesteads are exempt from attachments for debt; but owing to the stringency of the United States Bankruptcy law—as a protective measure—this has proved of no value whatever. Meetings have recently been held throughout the State, and resolutions passed calling upon Congress to so amend the law in question that its provisions may no longer clash with the interests of a majority of the people. Senator LEWIS, who has had charge of a measure of this kind for some time, considering that he is now sustained by the Republican Central Committee, may renew his advocacy of it with a better prospect of success.

Paris gave up her velvet-like pavement of asphalte, and now is becoming, it is declared, the dirtiest and worst-paved city in Europe. London is fast laying down the asphalte, and is becoming, on equal authority, the best-paved of capitals. Is it quite out of the question to get asphalte in New-York? The noise and unevenness of our great thoroughfares exceed even their filthiness, and why should we go without an improvement which is possible in the cities of Europe? As we set forth some time ago, asphalte costs less than granite. It cannot well be used on high grades, but this in New-York is seldom an objection. As regards the danger of fire, elaborate experiments lately made by Capt. SHAW and Mr. HAYWOOD have settled the question. Several kinds of asphaltum were used, and all showed that the material, as laid down, is practically non-combustible. The noiselessness of asphalte, once thought so dangerous, has not proved so in practice, and on the other hand the saving of wear and tear on carriages and horses—to say nothing of human nerves—is demonstrated to exceed very greatly any possible enhanced cost.

A member of the British Parliament, Mr. GOURLEY, has lately advocated, at a public meeting held in Sutherland, a project long ago suggested in this country, and at present a favorite scheme with leading spirits of the International Society. This consists in the establishment of a United States of Europe, by way of parallel to the United States of America. Mr. GOURLEY argues that only by such a device can the monstrous burden of standing armies be got rid of, and the true interests of the mass of the people be secured. His proposal is that the several States should be independent, as with ourselves, on all questions of local and internal government, but that Imperial questions should be decided by a Congress held at a national capital, which should be a European Washington. Mr. GOURLEY in his speech went on to say that should such be the condition of Continental Europe, "the policy of England, her colonies, and America ought to be that of a grand confederation and union of the whole of the Anglo-speaking people." This was received with immense applause, although, like the primary suggestion, there is no novelty about it. So far as this continent is concerned, it is not unlikely in time to be carried out; but neither geographical nor political considerations indicate any probability of transoceanic peoples ever being included in an American confederacy.

The Portuguese Cabinet has announced a very sweeping projet de réform. It includes abolition of the hereditary peerage; the removal of all restrictions on the Press; the abolition of punishment by death; the right of holding meetings subject only to police regulations, and the extension of the suffrage, already very low, to heads of a family who can write. This is all very well, but we cannot but think that the Portuguese Ministry would evince greater breadth of view and sagacity, if it had deferred some of these political reforms for the present, and had meanwhile devoted all its energies to expanding the trade of the country, making roads, stimulating enterprise, and for once in a while showing, what would be almost as great a surprise to the country as the earthquake of Lisbon, a surplus instead of a large deficit in its Budget. The vulgar consideration of money seems, except when borrowing or repudiating have to be done, reckoned beneath the notice of the statesmen of the Peninsula. Not that we mean to include Portugal in the same category as Spain in respect to brazen-faced treatment of bondholders.

The Central Park Museum—Destruction of Mr. Hawkins' Restorations.

A TIMES reporter called yesterday on Mr. B. WATERHOUSE HAWKINS in order to ascertain the truth of the allegations made in a communication which appeared in yesterday's TIMES in reference to the destruction of his restorations in the Central Park Museum. Mr. HAWKINS stated that all he had done during twenty-one months to restore the skeletons of the extinct animals of America, (of the Hadrosaurus, and the other gigantic animal, which was thirty-nine feet long,) was destroyed by order of Mr. HENRY HILTON, on the 3d of May last, with sledge-hammer, and carted away to Mount St. Vincent, where the remains were buried several feet below the surface. The preparatory sketches of other animals, including a mammoth and a mastodon and the molds and sketch models were destroyed. Mr. HILTON did this, said Mr. HAWKINS, out of ignorance, just as he had a coat of white paint put on the skeleton of a whale which Mr. PETER COOPER had presented to the Museum, and just as he had a bronze statue painted white. Mr. HILTON told the celebrated naturalist who had come from England to undertake the work that he should not bother himself with "dead animals," that there was plenty to do among the living. This illustrates the policy of having such ignorant men as HILTON at the head of one of the most important Departments of the City Government. When the skeletons were dug up again, by order of Col. STEBBINS, they were found broken in thousands of pieces. Prof. HENRY, of the Smithsonian Institute, when he heard of this piece of barbarism, would not believe it. "Why," he exclaimed, "I would have paid them a good price for it." Mr. HILTON, however, preferred to destroy the work of the naturalist which has cost the City at least $13,000.

NEW-YORK STATE AFFAIRS.

Progress in the Assembly of the Committee of Seventy's Charter.

No Money for Sectarian Schools—The City Record Question—A Co-operative Gas Company.

From Our Own Correspondent.

ALBANY, Thursday, Feb. 15.

The Charter of the Committee of Seventy was taken up again in Committee of the Whole, after the reading of the journal, this morning, Mr. EASTMAN in the chair. Section 92, which was under consideration when the Committee last rose, was resumed, and Mr. I. D. BROWN, of Cayuga, claimed the floor to finish the speech which he began on Tuesday, in favor of the amendment proposed by him. This amendment substitutes for section 92 a clause prohibiting all appropriations of public money by the City authorities for any sectarian or denominational school that is not under the same regulations and subject to the same laws as the public schools.

Mr. MOULTON desired to ask the gentleman from Cayuga a question: If the friends of the charter would consent to strike out section 92, would the gentleman waive his speech? Mr. BROWN replied that he was not aware who were intended to be designated as the "friends of the charter;" but, whoever they might be, he declined to accept their offer or to waive his right to address the House upon his amendment. He then proceeded to deliver a set speech, which he had previously committed to writing, against any and all appropriations of public money for the support of sectarian institutions of all kinds. At the conclusion of his remarks Mr. MOULTON moved that the whole of section 92 be stricken out. Col. HAWKINS advocated the motion, and approved the substitute of Mr. BROWN. He said that there were four institutions in New-York City, the Children's Aid Society, the Howard Mission, the Five Points House of Industry and the Juvenile Guardian Society, which had in the aggregate under their charge 25,000 homeless and destitute children whom it was the duty as well as the interest of the City to care for. The substitute of Mr. BROWN would prevent any aid being rendered to these societies by the City, and might cripple if not destroy the great and important work of benevolence in which they were engaged. It was in contemplation to introduce a general bill regulating appropriations for charitable institutions, and the whole subject had better be left out of the charter.

Mr. ALVORD approved of BROWN's substitute, and deemed it important that it should be incorporated in the charter. Our whole system of republican government rested on our system of free public schools, which were divested of all sectarian bias or favoritism. The whole people were taxed to support these schools, and there ought to be no diversion of this money, under any circumstances, to sectarian purposes. He was happy to announce that the Ways and Means were a unit in the determination to go to the root of this system of appropriations of public money for charitable and denominational purposes, and to leave these institutions to be supported by private benevolence.

Speaker SMITH said that before the Legislature adjourned this whole subject would come up for consideration under a general bill. Whatever conclusion may be arrived at, he hoped that the legislation would be such as to apply to all parts of the State alike. Meantime, he thought that the subject should be omitted entirely from the present charter.

Mr. PELL said that while he agreed with the Speaker as to the necessity of a general law prohibiting these appropriations, yet, for fear of accidents and the possibility that such a law might not be enacted before the Legislature adjourned, he desired the prohibition to be incorporated in the charter.

Mr. ALVORD also objected to omission of any prohibition in the charter for the reason that a general law, even if enacted, was liable to be repealed by the next or any subsequent Legislature. The prohibition ought to be incorporated in the Constitution of the State, and he had no doubt that when the proposition to that effect should come before the people of the State it would be ratified by an immense majority of the voters of both parties. Mr. SMYTHE advocated the substitute and hoped it would be inserted in the charter.

A REMINISCENCE OF TAMMANY LEGISLATION.

Mr. D. B. HILL, Democrat, called attention to the fact that Mr. ALVORD supported the Charity bill of 1870, which had been stigmatized as an infamous bill. This gave rise to a general discussion as to the action of the Republican and Democratic Parties on this question in past years. Mr. Q. D. BROWN said that the Charity bill of last year was not accessible to reporters after it had passed the Legislature, and until the final adjournment, when it was found that numerous items had been inserted into it that never passed either House. TWEED kept the bill locked up in his desk after its passage, and no one was allowed to see it.

Mr. JACOBS begged to correct the gentleman. The bill was not locked up in TWEED's desk, but was in his own desk. Mr. STRAHAN said, if that was so, he would like the gentleman from Kings (JACOBS) to throw a little light upon a subject of great interest to his constituents as well as to the people of the State at large. When the Charity bill was before the Assembly last year, he (STRAHAN) found that some one had inserted in it an appropriation for a Catholic Orphan Asylum in Newburg. Such an institution had no existence, nor was there a single orphan under its charge. He exposed the fraud, and the appropriation was stricken out by the Assembly. When the bill went up to the Senate, it was reinserted, the amount being reduced to $5,000 instead of $10,000. After the Conference Committee of the two Houses was appointed, he went before the Committee and again exposed the swindle, and had it stricken out a second time. The Charity bill passed the Legislature with no such appropriation in it, but, what was his surprise on procuring a copy of the bill after the adjournment, to find the $5,000 appropriation for the Newburg Catholic Orphan Asylum still there. Now, if Mr. JACOBS had the bill locked up in his desk from the time of its passage, would he have the kindness to explain how this bogus appropriation got there?

Mr. JACOBS did not "rise to explain," but it is due to him to say that the fraud was not perpetrated with his knowledge, and was probably the work of TWEED's clerk, CORNELIUS CORSON. As soon as Mr. JACOBS discovered the trick, he went with Mr. HUSTED and notified Controller NICHOLS of the fact, and the five thousand dollars to the bogus Orphan Asylum of Newburg was never paid.

THE SUBSTITUTE ADOPTED.

After this little episode, a vote was taken on Mr. BROWN's substitute for section 92, and it was adopted by a large majority.

The clerk then continued the reading of the charter by sections. Several verbal amendments were offered and adopted, but nothing affecting any important feature of the charter was discussed until section 101 was reached, which provides a City Record to publish corporation advertisements. This gave rise to a lengthy discussion, and was strenuously opposed by Messrs. HUSTED, ALVORD, D. B. HILL, TWOMBLY, SMYTHE and others, who characterized it as a scheme for saddling another Transcript job upon the City. Pending an amendment by HUSTED, that the City advertising be done in two daily papers having the largest circulation, the Committee, on motion of Mr. ALVORD, rose and reported progress, with the understanding that the charter be again made the special order for this evening's session. There are only two more sections to be disposed of, and, unless some trick is resorted to for further delay, there is a good prospect that the discussion on the general merits of the charter will be opened and closed to-night.

WINTER FREIGHT ON RAILROADS.

Mr. ALVORD introduced a bill forbidding any railroad company of this State to charge more than twenty-five per cent. advance on their Summer rates for freight during the Fall, Winter and Spring months.

A CORPORATION GAS COMPANY.

Mr. T. CAMPBELL introduced a bill authorizing the Mayor, Aldermen and Commonalty of New-York to go into the business of manufacturing and supplying gas for the people of that City.

A STOCK-JOBBING MEMORIAL DISPOSED OF.

The Committee on Commerce and Navigation of the Assembly presented their report on the investigation they were instructed to make of the Pacific Mail Steam-ship Company. They report that the memorial signed by one LAYMAN, on which the investigation was instituted, was gotten up by Wall-street stock-jobbers, for speculative purposes; that there was no ground for the charges contained in the memorial, and that the attempt to make use of the Legislature and consume the time of the Committee, for the purpose of serving their stock-gambling schemes, is deserving of the severest censure.

THE SENATE BACKS DOWN.

The Senate, today, has done just what all the knowing ones hereabouts expected it to do, viz: Reconsidered the adverse vote on the Assembly resolution providing for a February recess, and substantially adopted it. For some reason or other the lobby, which it must be admitted is as numerously represented here as at any former session, and which still exercises very great power, is unanimously, or nearly so, in favor of the recess. Members of the third House said confidently yesterday afternoon that the Senate would this morning reconsider and agree with the Assembly; and as to that there seemed to be no difference of opinion among them. The truth is, that the Erie crowd and those opposing the charter for New-York City found their hopes of success largely upon delay. All that these people want is that, like JEFF. DAVIS, they may be let alone. The status in quo suits them exactly. Every day that passes without affirmative action upon these matters is one day gained to them. True, it is said that the legislative session will not be shortened by the recess, the two Houses will sit late enough in the season to make up for it, &c., but this, specious as it seems, is not true. When the hundred days come to an end, there is always an impatience and eagerness on the part of members to get away. The farmers want to be on their farms, and the lawyers among their clients, and the recess of a week is practically just so much time taken out of the session, as the members cannot be kept together very long when the constitutional time is up. No wonder then that the lobby rushed out today when the reconsideration was carried, exulting that they had gained a substantial victory. Mr. PALMER thought that as Senators had come here relying upon the established custom of taking a recess at this time, it would be unfair to refuse them the opportunity. Their private business ought not to be utterly sacrificed to their public duties, nor was it necessary. Mr. MURPHY, who spends as much as three days a week in Albany, sternly opposed an adjournment. He thought Senators should remain and attend to the public business. Mr. D. P. WOOD also opposed the adjournment.

Mr. LORD, Democrat, said, as this was a Reform Legislature, and he did not know whether the cause of reform would be promoted by adjourning or staying here he did not know how to vote. He asked to be excused. His request was refused, and he said he now believed that the interests of reform would be promoted by the departure of the Legislature, so he voted for the recess, amid much merriment. The resolution was adopted, after being amended so as to make the recess begin on Saturday next, the 17th, instead of Friday to-day, and terminate on the Monday week following.

THE SENATE CLERK.

The Senate did not today elect a clerk. Mr. TENWILLIGER continues to officiate, and will probably do so throughout the week.

THE SEAMEN'S RETREAT.

The people of Staten Island are forwarding petitions favoring an examination of the affairs of the Seamen's Retreat, and a Committee of Investigation will probably be appointed. S.

The Reading of the New Charter—Quick Transit—Tweed's Contested Seat.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

ALBANY, Feb. 15—Evening.—The reading of the charter was continued this evening, and an hour and a half spent in discussing the provision with regard to a City Record. Mr. HUSTED's amendment, that City advertisements be printed in three newspapers having the largest circulation, was carried, and another amendment was adopted changing the title of the proposed City Record wherever it occurs in the charter to Journal of the City Government. These amendments were proposed by members who are regarded as opponents of the whole charter, and the solid and uniform vote by which they were carried indicates combination among the enemies of the charter, and weakens the confidence of its friends in its final success. Nearly all the Democrats, with the exception of Mr. TILDEN, voted with those who are believed to be determined to defeat the charter. It was past 9 o'clock before the reading of the document by sections was finished, and Mr. ALVORD then moved that the Committee rise, with the understanding that it should be made the special order again for to-morrow morning. He said he desired to express his views at considerable length on the merits of the charter as a whole, and he presumed others would like to do the same. He did not, however, wish to delay final action on it, and so far as he was concerned he would promise to do all he could to have it brought to a vote to-morrow. His motion was carried, the Committee rose, and the House adjourned. The lobbies and galleries were crowded during the evening with spectators, comprising most of the members of the Committee of Seventy now here.

Another hearing was had before the Joint Railroad Committee, this afternoon, on the quick-transit scheme for New-York. SWAIN explained his three-tier plan for the twentieth time. There are now twelve or fourteen different schemes for quick transit before the Legislature, and the "Central Underground" Company today introduced a bill to amend the charter so as to allow them to run under Broadway.

The Senate Committee on Privileges and Elections had a meeting this afternoon to look up the case of Mr. TWEED. At the last meeting the counsel for Mr. ROSSA, the contestant, were ordered to make their petition and charges more specific. Today they presented a new set of charges in compliance with this order. It is very voluminous and charges a great number of fraudulent and illegal acts connected with the election directly upon TWEED. His counsel, Mr. REYNOLDS, not being able to attend today, further hearing of the case was adjourned until after recess. S.

AMUSEMENTS.

Announcements and Notes.

The performance at the Academy of Music, this evening, is to be a benefit-representation. Mrs. ZELDA SEGUIN, than whom no more gifted, conscientious and sympathetic artist is now before the public, is the bénéficiaire. "Martha," with Mme. PAREPA-ROSA, Mrs. SEGUIN and Messrs. CASTLE and CAMPBELL in the principal characters, will be sung.... The final season of the Strakosch Italian Opera Troupe at the Academy will be commenced on Monday, March 4. "Il Trovatore," with Miss NILSSON, will be given.... A public rehearsal for the approaching Philharmonic concert occurs at the Academy of Music this afternoon.... Mrs. MOULTON, whose concert tour was interrupted by the sickness of her husband, is about to depart, in consequence of Mr. MOULTON's restored health, on a fresh journey. With the co-operation of Mr. JAMES M. WEHLE, Signor FOSSATI and Mr. BOWLER, and under the management of Mr. GEORGE W. COLBY, she will be heard in a matinée concert in Philadelphia to-morrow. Subsequently the company will visit Pittsburg, Wheeling, Dayton, Cincinnati, Lexington and Louisville.... Mr. WILLIAM CRESWICK will commence, on Tuesday, an engagement at the Boston Theatre, where his performances will alternate with those of the Strakosch Italian Opera Troupe. After the two weeks' engagement in Boston shall have expired, Mr. CRESWICK will enter upon the fulfillment of an important contract in New-York.... A large audience filled Apollo Hall on Tuesday afternoon, when Mr. JEROME HOPKINS gave one of his interesting piano-forte concerts and lectures to general satisfaction. Mr. HOPKINS' prose was, as usual, felicitously pointed by capital piano performances, selected from a repertory of one hundred pieces, by his hearers.

NEW-JERSEY LEGISLATURE.

Minority Representation—A New Temperance Law—Freights on Railroads—The Riparian Lands at Communipaw.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

TRENTON, Feb. 15.—A movement toward minority representation was made in the Senate today, Mr. CUTLER introducing a bill providing that no ballot for the choice of Judges of Election shall hereafter contain more than two names. There being three Judges required by law in every young precinct in the State, the passage of this bill would secure the minority, in all cases, a representation in the Boards of Election. The measure proposes the same principle as to township committees. In the House, this morning, Mr. WILLIAMS introduced a bill for the suppression of intemperance, which gives the families of drunkards and others the right to recover damages from liquor-dealers and landlords of premises used in the traffic, for all injuries resulting from the sale of intoxicating drinks. It was referred to a Special Committee. A bill was introduced in the House today making it unlawful for railroads to charge on freight carried for a distance of not less than five miles a larger sum than is collected for a greater distance. The bill to increase the capital stock of the New-Jersey Central Railroad Company, over which there has been a great deal of contention, was reported in the House today, with important amendments by the Committee of Corporations, by whom it has been held under consideration for some weeks. The amendments require the Company to pay to the State, before the 1st of January next, such sum for the lands under water at Communipaw now held by them, as may be fixed upon by the Riparian Commissioners, and also to pay annually, in addition to their present tax, one half of one per cent. upon their capital stock and the value of their rolling stock and equipments. These amendments will not, it is asserted, be accepted by the Central, but the bill, according to present indications, cannot be passed without some provisions of the kind proposed. The lands occupied by the Company are estimated by the Riparian Commissioners to be worth $1,200,000, but at a meeting held here yesterday they are said to have proposed to accept $650,000. The Company make no offer in the case. The bill to cede to Jersey City certain lands under water in Communipaw Bay was today recommitted in the Senate. The Republican joint caucus has nominated JOSEPHUS SOOY, present State Treasurer, for re-election. Mr. ROBERT H. HOWELL, State Prison Keeper, has also been renominated. Mr. WM. S. BANTA was nominated for Law Judge, and GARRET I. ACKERMAN for Lay Judge in Bergen County. Joint meeting will be held next week. A bill was introduced in the Senate today to legalize the Chicago Relief Bonds, amounting to $25,000, issued by Jersey City.

The Stewart Fund for the Relief of Chicago Sufferers.

The Chicago Times gives an account of the distribution of the gift of $50,000 sent by Mr. A. T. STEWART, of this City, for the relief of sufferers by the great fire. We quote:

"In accordance with the instructions given the gentlemen to whom the distribution of this noble charity was confided have extended aid only to widows and single women who, before the fire, were self-supporting. Taking pattern from the work which Mr. STEWART is doing for the benefit of a similar class in New-York City, they have sought to relieve their present necessities, and to place them in such a way that they can again provide for their own support. Thinking that his plans would be best carried out in that way they conferred upon Mr. N. S. BOUTON, with the approval of the Relief and Aid Society, the entire work of relieving their destitute sisters. Every Monday, Wednesday and Friday afternoon this gentleman receives applications for relief. Each case is considered separately by Mr. BOUTON, and the aid is either peremptorily refused, or granted on certain conditions. If the aid asked for will render the applicant self-supporting, it is immediately granted. The relief is given in money, however, the applicant wishes, a sewing-machine is bought, in accordance with a special arrangement, at a price much below that which is private individual would be obliged to pay. There have been relieved, out of this fund, 3,000 widows with children, and 1,500 sewing women. Many boarding-house keepers have also been granted temporary assistance, to enable them to take a fresh start. On Monday last there was distributed in money $3,892, and in sewing-machines $1,362 50. More than $40,000 of the original amount has already been expended. BOUTON employs as assistants five women and three men, all of whom suffered severely by the fire. The persons relieved are very different in general appearance and in their social relations from those who seek aid in the district-supply stations. Many ladies of known standing in society, who have been loath to appear in public as recipients of charity, have taken advantage of Mr. STEWART's generosity to obtain the aid which they so sadly needed."

The New-York Wesleyan University Club—Fourth Annual Reunion.

An agreeable reunion of the New-York Wesleyan University Club took place, yesterday evening, at the residence of Mr. DANIEL DREW, No. 41 Union-square. About 200 ladies and gentlemen were present, among whom were Bishop Janes, Dr. Pierce, of Randall's Island; Judge Reynolds, President of the Club; Dr. Cummings, Prof. Rice, Dr. Curry, Mr. Orange Judd, Dr. Foss, Dr. Strong, Dr. Kidder, Mr. C. C. North, Dr. Crooks, Dr. Andrews, Mr. Cornelius Disosway, Mr. Daniel Drew Chamberlain and Mr. Daniel Drew. The reception commenced at 5 P. M., and until 8 P. M. the proceedings were of an entirely social character. The drawing-rooms were tastefully decorated with flowers, and an elegant collation was served at 6 o'clock. In addition to the gentlemen named above, a large number of graduates of the Wesleyan University, Middletown, Conn., were present. Instrumental music was furnished by Mr. WAGNER, and a number of songs were sung by the ladies and gentlemen present. At 8½ P. M., the formal proceedings of the evening commenced, consisting of a number of speeches and toasts. Dr. PIERCE presided, and made a few remarks appropriate to the occasion. Dr. CUMMINGS spoke in eulogistic terms of the late Mr. ISAAC RICH, of Boston, who had left a large bequest to the Methodist Church, with which was built the Boston Theological Institute.

Bishop JANES spoke of the great benefits conferred on the Church by the Wesleyan University. Several other gentlemen delivered short addresses, and paid high compliments to the service done to the Church by Mr. DANIEL DREW.

The reunion broke up at about 11½, P. M.

Recapture of a Notorious Thief.

At the Court of Sessions in Brooklyn, last week, PETER QUINN was sentenced to the Penitentiary for four years and six months, for stealing $47 from a fellow-boarder at the Franklin House, in Fulton-street. On the way to the Penitentiary he escaped from the "Black Maria," as he says, by kicking the door out. As soon as he got out of the prison van he made for New-York, and took passage for Providence, R. I., on one of the Sound boats. This was a singularly fortunate move, as it happened that another passenger on the same boat was a gentleman who was in the Court-room at the time QUINN was sentenced. Directly the boat reached Providence, this gentleman gave information to the Police officer on the wharf, and QUINN was seized. He stoutly insisted that there was some mistake, declaring his name was JOHN DREW, and that he had just come from Buffalo. A detective was telegraphed for to Brooklyn, and QUINN was brought back last night. He has already done the State some service, having been imprisoned in State Prison in 1857 for highway robbery. An investigation is being made into the circumstances of his escape from the prison van, but QUINN says he was aided by any one, and kicked the door out himself.

The Baxter-Street Conflagration—The Body of a Man Found Buried in the Ruins.

At about five o'clock, last evening, the mangled remains of ANTONIO MONTEVERDI, an Italian, fifty-two years of age, were found buried beneath the ruins of the building No. 7 Baxter-street, which was crushed by the walls of the adjoining structure falling upon it on Wednesday night during the fire. MONTEVERDI, it appears, lived alone in the garret of No. 7, and was not missed until yesterday, when, on search being made, his body was found in the ruins. It is supposed that the deceased was asleep during the fire and was suffocated by the dense smoke, and his body was afterward crushed by the falling walls. His face showed the marks of having been severely burned. The remains were removed to the Franklin-street Police Station.

An East-Side Shooting Affray.

Yesterday afternoon ALBERT BOOTH, of No. 9 Lewis-street, and ALBERT SCHICK, of No. 268 South Third-street, Williamsburg, became involved in a quarrel at the corner of Avenue D and Second-street, during which BOOTH drew a revolver and fired two shots at his antagonist, one of the bullets lodging in SCHICK's left arm. Both were arrested and taken to the Union Market Police Station, where the wounded man was attended by a surgeon, and the belligerents were then looked up. SCHICK was intoxicated during the fracas.

THE ALABAMA CLAIMS.

Epitome of Opinion in the English Morning Journals.

The London Times of Jan. 30 says "that the case presented by Her Majesty's Government to the Geneva Tribunal of Arbitration differs in one essential respect from that presented by the Government of the United States. Not only is it far more colorless and temperate in its tone, but it is far more limited in its scope, proceeding, as it does, on the assumption that international law alone is the standard by which the conduct of Great Britain must be judged. It is maintained, in effect, that bona fide neutrality is impartial, and not one-sided or 'benevolent;' that neutral duties are 'not affected by considerations arising from the political relation which before the war the belligerents may have sustained to each other,' and that commissions regularly issued by a belligerent Government must be respected, even though its political sovereignty be not recognized by the neutral. The most important propositions in the case, however, are those which bear on the cadinal question of 'due diligence.' It is submitted that no Government can be expected to employ a higher degree of vigilance under a sense of international obligation than civilized Governments are wont to employ on their own behalf; and, moreover, that in fact, Governments, like individuals, have usually been more solicitous about their own security than about that of their neighbors. Such are the main points of international law and practice upon which, in combination with the new rules, the British Government rests its vindication. How far it will be desirable in the counter case to deal with the sweeping indictment on which the British nation is summoned to the bar of the Geneva arbitrators is a question demanding very grave consideration from the Government. That it would have been as unbecoming as it would have been impossible to repel such an indictment before it was preferred will be acknowledged on all hands."

On Jan. 31, the Times' reference to the case ends: "It is enough to say that, in our judgment, the sincere desire of Her Majesty's Government to preserve an impartial neutrality is manifest throughout, and the pains taken by its opponents to fix upon it a malevolent intent argue a consciousness that upon the simple issue of 'due diligence' it has a good defence. This inference is confirmed by an extraordinary passage in the American case, where it is insisted that by the judgment on the Alexandra, and the refusal of Lord RUSSELL to prohibit certain acts of which Mr. ADAMS complained, 'Great Britain assumed and justified all similar acts which had been or might be committed, and relieved the United States from the necessity of showing that due diligence was not exercised to prevent them.' On the other hand, it is right to point out that, in the British case, the reception of vessels like the Alabama in colonial waters is not discussed as fully as it deserves. 'They were received,' it is told, as vessels of war in the ports of Great Britain, as well as in those of the other neutral countries visited by them. In British ports they were received on the same footing as in those of other neutral nations, and were allowed to purchase supplies on the same conditions as armed vessels of the United States, careful precautions being employed to prevent any renewal or augmentation of their warlike force within British waters. If this can be established, as we doubt not that it can for all purposes of the arbitration, no possible liability can arise on account of the sympathy with the Confederates which may have been shown by the Bahama merchants, or even by colonial authorities in their private capacity. But it is not to be concluded that various specific instances of partiality, approaching to connivance with abuses of neutrality, are alleged by the United States against colonial authorities in their public capacity. These instances must be carefully sifted, lest they should fall within the second rule of the Washington Treaty, which is directed against negligence in limiting the so-called 'hospitalities' allowed to belligerent cruisers in neutral ports. It is needless to say that, if any such negligence was displayed—which remains to be proved—it was displayed in spite of direct and repeated instructions from the Home Government. It should also be remembered and pressed upon the Geneva Tribunal, that in this as in other respects, Great Britain and her colonies had to deal with a casus omissus in international law. Coal, in particular, is an article which, for obvious reasons, has never been classed among warlike stores, though of prime value in naval warfare, and it would be monstrous to mulct Great Britain because this or that Colonial Governor may have allowed the Alabama or the Florida too liberal a supply of it."

The Times on Feb. 1 says: "We trust, and believe, that the painful feeling which has been excited by the perusal of the American case will not lead us into recriminations such as have been applied to ourselves; but it must by this time be evident to all that we cannot go into Court to answer the claims for indirect damages that have been preferred. If they are covered by the words of the treaty, we must repudiate a document never, as we believe, proposed, and most certainly never subscribed, in any sense, by us. We must protest at once, and finally, that we utterly disallow that indirect damages are included in the reference under the treaty. We never consented to their being included. We cannot go on if they are persistently asserted. * * * It may appear superfluous to refer to what has been uniformly held in England ever since the treaty was negotiated. No statement of ours could detract from the force of an agreement to which we had bound ourselves, but contemporaneous explanations given by Commissioners and Ministers of State may be admitted to explain the view they took of the terms of the treaty in negotiating and sanctioning it. Last June Lord RUSSELL attacked the treaty in the House of Lords, Gen. SCHENCK, a Commissioner of the Treaty, and then, as now, American Minister, being in the Diplomatic Gallery. What was the language of Lord GRANVILLE on that occasion? He said: 'The noble Earl (RUSSELL) said that the United States made no concessions, but in the very language of the protocols Mr. FISH, renewing the propositions he had made before to much larger national claims'—and Lord GRANVILLE proceeded to quote Mr. FISH's demand for indirect damages, including the cost of the prolongation of the war, adding, 'These were the precautions which might have been carried on under the former administration, but they entirely disappear under the limited reference, which includes merely complaints arising out of the escape of the Alabama.' Lord RIPON subsequently referred to and adopted the argument of his colleague. Lord CAIRNS, indeed, at a later hour remarked that the words of the treaty were wide enough to include the demands that were understood to be excluded, but his interpretation was immediately repudiated by the Duke of ARGYLL, and there was no hint of difference of opinion as to the sense in which the treaty had been accepted. We now find that the United States are attempting to fasten upon it a meaning never suggested by any of their Commissioners at the time, the mere hint of which would, indeed, have caused the negotiations to be broken off. We cannot too strongly regret this ill-advised proceeding; but however painful the duty it imposes upon us, we cannot recede from it. We must give notice at once that the reference now attempted to be set up is not the reference to which we agreed, and we must retire from it altogether if the attempt to pervert the treaty from its original meaning be persisted in."

The Daily Telegraph says: "No such pretensions have been or can be for a moment allowed by Her Majesty's Government. Those diplomatists would have singularly forgotten their English blood who negotiated, those statesmen would have made an ignoble plunge toward national degeneracy who sanctioned, a treaty that by the utmost stretch of possibility could strike Great Britain with a vast war fine because she had been honestly neutral in the American civil strife. Whatever may be said about the wording of the treaty, its spirit and intent were perfectly clear to the honorable men who signed it on behalf of the English Government. The duty incumbent on the Ministry is obvious and natural. It is not to take any violent steps, by way of protest, or special notice, or otherwise to absolve itself from responsibility in the indirect claims. It is simply to fulfil the promise of its original case, and meet in a supplementary document the strange American pretensions. We have no need to urge upon the Government the utmost promptitude in placing before the tribunal the rejoinder to the American case, involving a distinct and absolute repudiation of the indirect claims, without argument and without reserve. Until that rejoinder shall come into the hands of the arbiters, they are virtually precluded from considering in any way an American claim that so manifestly was never contemplated either by the English negotiators or by those who prepared the English case. Half a dozen words will be sufficient, in the forefront of the rejoinder or appendix, to place clearly before the Court the views of England on this subject. But those words must be spoken without delay, without falter, with a boldness and confidence of mien which shall testify that behind the men who utter them stands the united English nation—willing to do its duty, but resolute to uphold its right."

In an article with the caption, "The Government Journal on the American Demands," the Pall Mall Gazette argues thus: "In its capacity of apologist for the Government, the Telegraph has taken up the American demands under the Treaty of Washington; writing, as usual in such emergencies, with abundance of false suggestion and bold misrepresentation. Thus, it says that nothing has happened, since Mr. SUMNER put forward those claims for compensation for indirect loss, to 'give the demand any legality.' It would be almost as true to say that the Treaty of Washington has no existence. The very purpose of the treaty is to give legality to all claims for compensation which can be established under theree rules of conduct therein and never before said to be binding on neutrals. These rules, now for the first time made and acknowledged as law, confer a legal status on certain claims to which they could not apply at the time of Mr. SUMNER's demand, for then they did not exist. These are the Rules:

"A neutral Government is bound—First—To use due diligence to prevent the fitting out, arming, or equipping, within its jurisdiction, of any vessel which it has reasonable ground to believe is intended to cruise or to carry on war against a Power with which it is at peace; and also to use like diligence to prevent the departure from its jurisdiction of any vessel intended to cruise or carry on war as above, such vessel having been specially adapted, in whole or in part, within such jurisdiction, to war-like use.

Secondly—Not to permit or suffer either belligerent to make use of its ports or waters as the base of naval operations against the other, or for the purpose of the renewal or augmentation of military supplies or arms, or the recruitment of men.

Thirdly—To exercise due diligence in its own ports and waters, and, as to all persons within its jurisdiction, to prevent any violation of the foregoing obligations and duties.

The treaty declares in so many words that the legal responsibility cast upon us by these very wide rules is acknowledged and accepted now for the first time. For, says the treaty:

Her Majesty's Government cannot assent to the foregoing rules as a statement of principles of international law which were in force at the time when the claims mentioned in article 1 arose, but that her Majesty's Government, in order to evince its desire of strengthening the friendly relations between the two countries and of making satisfactory provision for the future, agrees that in deciding the questions between the two countries arising out of those claims, the arbitrators should assume that her Majesty's Government had undertaken to act upon the principles set forth in these rules.

Therefore it is contrary to the truth to say that the American claims have no more legal validity now than when Mr. SUMNER pushed them to extravagant lengths. We confer upon them a legal validity by the treaty, which we say in the treaty is new, and a gift. That is the fact. But, it may be answered, the concession does not go so far as the Americans pretend. That is the question within the fact. We have seen that by the treaty we assent to the application of the three rules to the claims set forth in article 1. The question is whether, as set forth in article 1., these claims can be said to include demands on account of indirect loss; whether, in fact, they are included in the words 'claims growing out of acts committed by certain vessels, and generically known as the Alabama claims.' And thus we see that the Telegraph, apologizing for the Government if not expounding their views, gives to the facts a totally false color. That journal says, 'Those diplomatists would have singularly forgot their English blood who negotiated—those statesmen would have made an ignoble plunge toward national degeneracy who sanctioned—a treaty that by the utmost stretch of possibility could strike Great Britain with a vast war fine because she had been honestly neutral in the American civil strife.' This we do not dispute; but the question is not so much whether our diplomatists forget their English blood, as whether by the utmost stretch of possibility or even by less they have laid open to the infliction of a vast war-fine. If the terms of the treaty alone are considered, (and we suppose the United States Government will cling to them,) there can be little doubt that this is at least disputable. But the Telegraph asserts positively, and as if from information received, that 'not one word in the treaty' or any document regarded by our Commissioners as having any reference, other than exclusive, to the indirect claims.' This is what we supposed. Further, the Telegraph intimates that our Government will promptly answer the American case, absolutely repudiating the indirect claims 'without argument and without reserve.' 'without a moment's pause.' How much is very much what we have recommended; and we only hope the Telegraph is not misinformed."

SECTARIAN SCHOOLS.

Statistics Relative to Public Charities—Progress of Catholic Schools—Interesting Facts.

The following selections are from footings of tables of statistics prepared by the New-York City Council of Political Reform, relating to public charities. These tables have been collated wholly from official reports of City and State officers, the yearly reports of the institutions, and statements furnished by the City and State Controllers. Sufficient returns have not been received for the year 1871 to complete the tables for that year.

There are ten charitable institutions sustained by the State that received in 1870:

From the State	$1,064,271 84
From other sources	1,335,034 34
Total	$2,400,306 18
The average number of beneficiaries of these institutions for 1870 was	3,102
The number of almshouses in New-York State in 1870 was	6,900
Number supported and relieved	75,716
Total cost	$1,187,490 35

Thirty-six dispensaries received from the State in 1871:

From other sources	$53,100 00 61,048 91
Total	$114,148 91
Number of persons treated	284,107
Number of prescriptions	280,257
Number of vaccinations	15,809

In addition to the above, 282 private charitable institutions, including schools, asylums, homes and hospitals, received aid in 1870:

From the State and City of New-York	$1,725,315 89
From other sources	1,702,075 08
Total	$3,427,390 97
Number of beneficiaries	117,593

Seventy-three of these private charitable institutions located in New-York City are under the control of religious denominations, and were aided in 1870 as follows:

1 German Reformed institution	$1,035 00
1 Lutheran institution	1,911 16
1 Methodist Episcopal institution	11,735 04
2 Hebrew institutions	11,453 72
13 Protestant Episcopal institutions	20,516 94
55 Roman Catholic institutions	641,433 00
73	$688,084 86
Received from other sources	$422,304 48
Number of beneficiaries	18,846

One hundred and sixteen of these private charitable institutions, located in other cities of the State, and under the control of religious denominations, were aided in 1870 as follows:

One Hebrew institution	$500 00
Two Protestant Episcopal institutions	1,872 15
Two Lutheran institutions	5,139 09
One Baptist institution	7,211 01
One hundred and ten Roman Catholic institutions	240,332 59
Total	$255,054 84
Received from other sources	$314,312 97
Number of beneficiaries	24,573

Fifty-five of these private charitable institutions, not under the control of religious denominations, located in New-York City, were aided in 1870 as follows:

From the State	$637,444 59
From other sources	738,104 67
Number of beneficiaries	59,082

Thirty-eight of these private charitable institutions, not under control of religious denominations, located in other parts of the State, were aided in 1870, as follows:

From the State	$144,731 60
From other sources	227,352 96
Number of beneficiaries	5,392

Of the 117,593 beneficiaries of these private charitable institutions, 74,646 are pupils of week-day schools, aided by public funds, and are under the following management:

	Pupils.
18 non-denominational schools, with	15,972
1 German Reformed school, with	409
1 Hebrew school, with	1,000
3 Lutheran schools, with	885
11 Protestant Episcopal schools, with	4,853
112 Roman Catholic schools, with	52,009
Total	74,646

The average daily attendance of the public schools of New-York City in 1870 was 96,683
In 1860 55,050

The average yearly increase 4,163
Average attendance in 1871 was 99,672
Decrease 1,061

By census of 1870 the whole number of the school population of New-York City was 316,447
In 1860 it was 235,975
Average yearly increase 8,047

Small-Pox in Brooklyn Moderating.

Information was brought to Dr. COCHRAN, Health Officer of Brooklyn, yesterday, that infected rags were being landed on some of the wharfs of the city from the ship Missouri and other quarantined vessels in the port. The rags were intended for the Fifth Ward dealers, and if landed might have spread contagion through the whole city. Effectual measures have been taken to prevent this, and the section of the city comprised in this ward has been placed in special charge of Dr. HOLLEY. Dr. COCHRAN reports that the small-pox has moderated, and is subsiding. He attributes this, among other things, to the thorough system of vaccination which was established, and is in favor of maintaining all preventive measures at present, as owing to the frequent arrival of steamers with emigrants from Europe, the city is liable to receive contagion at any moment. There are at this time seventy-one patients in the small-pox hospital, showing a decrease of twenty-three as compared with the last report. The Committee of Investigation appointed by the Commissioners on the small-pox hospital, report that they have personally by visit and inquiry ascertained all the facts necessary to form a correct opinion as to all matters referred to them. They questioned both patients and nurses, and in every instance elicited a favorable reply. They are of opinion that the building is well managed, and that the sick patients receive all the care and attention necessary.

Homer and His Translators.

Last evening Prof. BAYARD lectured at the University of the City of New-York, upon "Homer and his English Translators." He began with CHAPMAN, the first to render HOMER into English, and passed from him to the other translators of the Greek poet, in their order, comparing and commenting upon each. He closed with a brief criticism upon BRYANT's translation, the last, and by the opinion of the speaker, the best which has yet been made, both for eloquence of diction and faithfulness to the original.

REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS.

The business transacted at the Exchange yesterday, Feb. 15, was again of decided interest, and the result a success, showing conclusively that a healthy impetus has been given to the market by the favorable consummation of the sales recently held. The most important auction of the day was that conducted by E. H. LUDLOW & CO., who, by order of the executors of FRANCES HENDRICKS, deceased, disposed of sixty-three lots and gores of land located respectively on Forty-ninth and Fiftieth streets, west of Tenth-avenue, all of which were sold and at good figures. The gore lots on Forty ninth-street control a front of 339 feet, the land in the rear belonging to the Astor estate, while in Fiftieth-street the front covered by the gore lots sold is some 570 feet. The prospective value of the land can therefore readily be seen, when the rear property shall become needed for building purposes. Nearly all the lots are, however, covered with rock, and a large expenditure will be required before they can be brought into use, and when this is considered, the prices realized, it will be seen, were excellent. A detailed report is given below, with the names of purchasers in each instance noted. The attendance at the auction was large, and bidding active, while the manner in which it was carried through by the auctioneers in charge, was all that could be desired. The aggregate sum realized was $145,800. The lot on Sackett-street, Brooklyn, belonging to the same estate, advertised also for sale, was not offered, but publicly withdrawn.

In addition to the above, considerable other business was transacted, of which the following is a review: MULLER, WILKINS & CO., by order of the executors of S. S. WARD, deceased, sold four lots of land located on the south-east corner of Washington and Laight streets, each 20 by 75, for $7,950 each, purchaser, C. N. BOSCHEN. Also, the premises No. 329 Washington-street, between Hubert and Laight streets, embracing a lot of land, 25 by 80, with a small two-story brick stable thereon for $8,960; purchaser, DEWES BOWE. Two lots of land on Vestry-street, between Washington and West streets, belonging to the same estate, were also offered, but as announced as the buildings were not disposed of with the property, no sale was effected. The same firm further sold at public auction, five full lots on the south side of One Hundred and Forty-ninth-street, between Eighth and Ninth avenues, at $8,676 a piece; purchaser, F. NESMITH. A lot on Third-avenue, north of Seventy-eighth-street, was also offered at auction, and bids to the amount of $17,450 received, but, as we are informed, probably not sold. A lot on Twenty-eighth-street, between Sixth and Seventh avenues, with two buildings thereon, the premises being known as No. 145, was in addition offered, but without result. The Supreme Court sale by the same firm of house and lot, No. 116 West Fourteenth-street, was adjourned for two weeks.

At a trustees' sale ALLEN & BROWN sold two three-story high-stoop brick houses and lots known respectively as Nos. 7 and 9 Varick-place and Sullivan-street, between Houston and Bleecker-street, one for $14,200 and the other for $14,050, the purchaser being M. L. DUNCAN and G. LACHAT. The same firm also sold at public auction a three-story and basement brick house and lot, known as No. 209 Spring-street, between Sullivan and Macdougal-street, with right of alley-way to the last named street, for $13,550; purchaser, MICHAEL WILLIAMS. A frame house and lot on Fifty-second-street, 525 feet East of Eleventh-avenue, was, in addition, offered but not sold, although knocked down for $3,750.

The only other sale effected was one by order of the Supreme Court, in foreclosure, under the direction of PHILO T. RUGGLES, Esq., referee, made by A. J. BLEECKER, SON & CO., who sold two lots (buildings on same recently destroyed by fire) on the north side of Forty-second-street, 80 feet west of Second-avenue, for $12,750. The legal sales of property on Elm and on Fifty-fifth streets, announced for yesterday, by the same auctioneers, were both adjourned until the 29th inst. An offering at public auction of a house and lot known as No. 337 Leonard-street, Brooklyn, E. D., by S. DINGEE, for which bids to the sum of $34,200 were made, but no sale effected, closed the business of the day.

In Brooklyn, on Wednesday, JOHNSON & MILLER sold at auction, by order of the Supreme Court in partition, under the direction of CHAS. M. EARLE, Esq., referee, the following property: Two lots on the west side of Bond-street, 60 feet south of President-street, each 20 by 75, sold to ALFRED WALLACE for $680 each; one lot, 20 by 100, on the north side of President-street, 95 feet west of Bond-street, sold to OWEN KINMAN for $625, and one lot same size, adjoining, sold for $600.

For today at the Exchange in this City, the only sale announced is one of a legal character, JOSEPH MCGUIRE, auctioneer, of a house and lot on One Hundred and Twenty-third-street, between Sixth and Seventh avenues. At private sale, WM. H. RAYNOR, No. 65½ Pine-street, reports having recently sold City real estate as follows: one full lot on the south side of Fifty-seventh-street, 475 feet west of Fifth-avenue, sold for $27,500; one full lot on the north side of One Hundred and Third-street, seventy feet west of Madison-avenue, sold for $6,350; and the four-story brown-stone house and lot, (20 by 50 by 100.) No. 137 West Forty-second-street, sold for $40,000.

COUNTRY REAL ESTATE.

A—ROMEO! HOMEO! IN THE beautiful, growing, and enterprising village of WHITESTONE, LONG ISLAND.
A neat cosy house for $3,250.
A three-story house, bath-room, closets, &c., $6,500. Larger and more commodious houses, $7,000 to $10,000. Choice lots at $250 to $600, according to location. Streets macadamized, curbed, guttered and sewered, and no assessments to the purchaser. Neighborhood and improvements first-class.
Whitestone, only seven miles from Hunter's Point, and forty-five minutes from 34th-st., is a most accessible, healthy and attractive suburb. It has churches, schools, refined society, &c. It is practically nearer the business centres of New-York than Harlem or Prospect Park, Brooklyn. Business men, employers, teachers and mechanics can live cheaper, more comfortably, be healthier, and reach their stores, schools and workshops easier and quicker than by residing in New-York or Brooklyn. The Flushing and North-side Railroad, (terminus at Whitestone,) one of the most perfectly equipped and admirably managed roads in this country, runs forty one trains daily, from 5:30 A. M. to midnight, and in Summer steamers ply constantly between New-York and Whitestone. The improvements now prospecting with great vigor will stimulate the growth of Whitestone, and surely enhance the value of this property.
N. B.—A commutation ticket for one year given to every purchaser of a house, also to lot buyers if they build.
Terms on lots: Seventy-five per cent. on mortgage for five years; if purchaser will build, all may remain. On houses: The principal part on mortgage, and monthly payments to suit.
We particularly invite parties looking to suburban homes or sites to call and get free excursion tickets and maps, and examine this property before hiring or purchasing elsewhere.
Tickets good for all trains.
JOHNSON & MILLER,
Agents of the Whitestone Land Association,
No. 25 Nassau-st., New-York.
Mr. F. B. VAN SICKLEN, our agent at the station at Whitestone, will meet purchasers, and show them the property.

FORTY-SECOND CONGRESS.

SECOND SESSION.

SENATE....WASHINGTON, Thursday, Feb. 15.

Mr. COLE submitted a resolution, which was agreed to, instructing the Committee on Education and Labor to inquire into the expediency of an amendment to the Constitution providing some educational test in the exercise of the electoral franchise. Also a resolution directing the Committee on Territories to report on the expediency of enacting a law to prevent the indiscriminate slaughter and extermination of antelope and buffalo.

BROWNLOW AND BECK.

Mr. BROWNLOW proposed to make a personal explanation in writing, in reply to the remarks made by Mr. BECK, of Kentucky, about him, in the House, on the 22d ult. Mr. BECK, on that occasion, said that Mr. BROWNLOW, while Governor of Tennessee, made that State a pandemonium; that he and the other reconstructing Governors were hated and despised, and that their only refuge, if they could escape the Penitentiary, seemed to be in the Senate of the United States. Mr. BROWNLOW said that there was a time when Mr. BECK would not have dared to put this insult upon him, lest he (BROWNLOW) should take Mr. BECK's overseer's whip from his hand and lay it over his back. He also said that when Mr. BECK abandoned the respectable business of a hostler and became a slave driver, he sank below the notice of all decent men. The Vice-President said this language was improper under the rule. Mr. CHANDLER moved that Mr. BROWNLOW have unanimous consent to proceed. Mr. CASSERLY asked the Vice-President if he knew of any precedent for the utterance of such language in the Senate Chamber. The Vice-President did recollect several instances when such language had been uttered, but of course not in accordance with parliamentary law. Mr. BLAIR said Mr. BROWNLOW's language was appropriate to the means by which he obtained his seat, and hoped he would be allowed to proceed. The Clerk then read the explanation. It reviewed Mr. BROWNLOW's career as Governor of Tennessee, and asserted, that his dealings with the State Treasury had been strictly honest, and that Mr. BECK's statement that he (Gov. BROWNLOW) was hated and despised by the people of Tennessee, was as false as hell. In conclusion, he said he left BECK in the worst possible company, namely, with himself.

SUMNER'S RESOLUTIONS.

The Senate then resumed the consideration of the Sumner resolution. Mr. HARLAN said that since 1865 our Government had had on hand a great quantity of ordnance stores, which by authority of Congress had been sold at public and private sale, and had been purchased largely by our own citizens, as well as by foreigners. When the war broke out between France and Prussia the Government refused to sell arms to either belligerent or to their known agents. Of course they continued to sell to our own citizens, and it was not in their power to prevent these arms being resold to one or the other belligerent. There was not the slightest particle of evidence to show that our authorities were cognizant that any of the arms sold were destined for the French. He replied to the intimation that all the money received on account of the arms sold was not paid into the Treasury. He read from the report of the Chief of Ordnance of the sales of arms, and claimed that the discrepancies alleged by Mr. SUMNER did not exist. In reply to the intimation that certain sales of arms had not been included in the report of the Chief of Ordnance, to support which Mr. SUMNER had read an Associated Press dispatch stating that they had been made, Mr. HARLAN explained that no such sales were made, the bids having been rejected, and in proof of this he produced the records of the War Department. He then reviewed in detail the preamble of Mr. SUMNER's resolution, and argued that the letters and documents cited or referred to therein showed clearly that some one in the country must be in non-official and unauthorized communication with the French Legation, because several of them could not have been got in any other way. He believed, therefore, that the whole proceeding had been incited by the present French Government, and that its agents had been sufficiently adroit to draw into it a member of the Senate. The French Government wanted evidence to prosecute some of its own agents suspected of dishonesty, and it had been able to find some person here who was willing to aid it, and rausack the records of the French Legation in the hope of finding something that would be used against a department of his own Government. The preamble compared the records of the War Department, of the amounts received for arms, and the French records of what had been paid by that Government. Now the question was where did the author of the preamble get access to the French record? Mr. SUMNER—I held that record in my hand while I spoke yesterday. It will be found in the Journal of the French Republic. Mr. HARLAN—Another newspaper statement. Mr. EDMUNDS—Here it is in the New York Sun. [Laughter.] Mr. SUMNER—It is the report of a French official, published in the French official journal. Mr. HARLAN—And copied into the Sun. Mr. SUMNER—Copied into the Sun. [Laughter.] Mr. HARLAN—Well, whether that is sufficient authority for the arraignment of a high officer of our own Government by a member of the American Senate, I leave for the American people to decide. Mr. HARLAN then criticised the resolution itself, and asked why it proposed to limit the investigation to the period of the Franco-Prussian war, if the only motive was to vindicate our own Government from unjust suspicion. Again, why was the Committee to ascertain who were the real parties in interest? What difference did it make to our Government whether the purchasers bought for themselves or somebody else? Further, why must we ascertain what sums were actually paid by the real parties in interest? The explanation was that the French Government wanted this information to be used against their own officials, and the question was whether it was legitimate for the American Senate to lend itself to the French Legation for such a purpose, and if France had received any wrong at our hands, let her resort to the Courts. Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN said he could not vote for the preamble, and he did not see how any Senator could, and the resolution itself was wholly unnecessary. The preamble and resolution together were a very anomalous production, and if they had not been introduced by one whose patriotism he could not question, (Mr. SUMNER,) he would be forced to believe that they were introduced in hostility to this country. The events to be investigated had occurred in 1870, and no complaint on the subject had been made by Prussia, yet, in the absence of such complaint, or any other ground, an American Senator introduced a preamble asserting that the good name of our Government was seriously compromised, and a resolution proposing an investigation. Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN reviewed the paragraphs of the preamble one by one, and argued that some of the statements quoted in it were plainly false, and that none of them furnished foundation for the allegation that the good name of our Government was seriously compromised. The investigation must now go on, but he hoped it would be made, not by the Committee proposed in this resolution, because by Parliamentary usage the Chairman of that Committee (Mr. SUMNER) would be one who had already assumed in this preamble the truth of the charges to be investigated. The whole matter would be referred to the Committee on Investigation and Retrenchment, the Committee created for the purpose of investigating. This was an era of investigations. They were ordered on almost every pretext, and many of them, like this one, were quite unnecessary, but they would continue until the Philadelphia Convention. Mr. SCHURZ said that this investigation had seemed to be very popular in the Senate yesterday, but it was less so today. It was now regarded as a disgrace to the American name, and the Senator from Massachusetts (Mr. SUMNER) who had always passed for a good American, was suddenly made to appear in the character of an agent for France. The Senator (Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN) had also charged him with doing that which would locate the Prussian Government to make claims against the United States. It appeared, therefore, that Mr. SUMNER must be regarded as a Prussian agent also, and that the two great belligerents of 1870 were united in this one thing. [Laughter.] But the opposition to this investigation should not excite surprise, for it would be remembered that the resolution for the investigation of the abuses of the New-York Custom-house had been met in the same manner, and that the men who moved and urged it were said to be very doubtful characters, compared with LEET and STOCKTON. [Laughter.] The pending resolution contemplated the investigation of certain facts, and the question for the Senate was, is the investigation necessary? Senators who argued that it was not had gone over the preamble point by point, and he would follow their example, which he did. He insisted that there was no ground whatever for the insinuation that Mr. SUMNER or any Senator had instigated the proceedings of the French Government. The facts seemed to be that that Government had ordered certain investigations, and had discovered difficulties and also reasons for believing that the Government of the United States was aware of these practices of a questionable character having gone on here. The rule laid down for itself by the United States Government seemed to have been that no arms should be sold to a known agent of either belligerent, and if this rule had been observed, no arms would have been sold, when their going at once into the hands of the belligerent was a matter of ordinary probability. When the war between France and Prussia was raging, it was a fair presumption that every man offering to purchase a large lot of arms wanted them for one or other of the belligerents. When Mr. REMINGTON applied for 50,000 muskets and 17,000,000 cartridges, it was as certain that a great change had taken place in the market for arms, and it was the duty of the Government to be more than ordinarily circumspect in the disposal of its ordnance stores. He would not say that the Secretary of War knew, at first, that Mr. REMINGTON was the agent of the French Government, but he soon afterward disclosed himself as such. The reports made to the French Government showed that all the lots of arms sold here went to France. Mr. CONKLING denied this, and said the Senator (Mr. SCHURZ) knew very well that France and Prussia did not constitute the only, or even the chief market, for arms in Christendom at that time. Mr. SCHURZ said the investigation would show that at least an overwhelming majority of the arms went to France. Mr. CONKLING—There is a difference between all and an "overwhelming majority." Mr. SCHURZ read from Mr. REMINGTON's letter of Dec. 13, 1870, his statement that he had bought fifty batteries, &c., and said that this showed REMINGTON to have been negotiating with the Government after he had declared himself to be a French agent, because after the indorsement of REMINGTON as a gentleman of high character, yesterday, by the Senator, (Mr. CONKLING,) it would not do to explain away his statements in this letter by saying that he was trying to magnify his importance in the eyes of the French Government. Mr. CONKLING said he had not yet indorsed Mr. REMINGTON as a gentleman of high character, but he might do so if it should become necessary. Mr. SCHURZ thought that the circumstances to which he was calling attention seemed to make it necessary. Mr. CONKLING asked whether Mr. SCHURZ meant to say or imply that Mr. REMINGTON's letter necessarily meant that he had made the purchases in person? The language of the letter would be just as true and appropriate if he had done the business through agents, and we had the word of the Secretary of War that no arms were sold to Mr. REMINGTON by the Department after about the middle of October, 1870. Mr. SCHURZ was willing to put the letter before the country without further comment. He then discussed the sales to Mr. RICHARDSON, the alleged attorney of Messrs. REMINGTON & SONS. Mr. RICHARDSON, he said, was a lawyer of Ilion, N. Y. He ordered 50,000 muskets. What a bellicose lawyer. [Laughter.] What did a little country lawyer want with 50,000 muskets? Here, surely, was exceedingly strong ground for suspicion on the part of the War Department or else there had been transparent jugglery, and in either case investigation was necessary. Mr. REMINGTON himself had since gone to France carrying a certificate of character from the Secretary of War, indorsed, as he (Mr. SCHURZ) was informed, by Mr. CONKLING. Mr. CONKLING denied that he had indorsed any letter written by anybody else for Mr. REMINGTON, but stated that he had written a letter himself, saying that so far as he had ever known the character of the REMINGTON BROS., commercially and personally, was good, and their standing enviably high in the community in which they had always lived. He had written the letter at the request of Mr. REMINGTON, who had told him that his character had been questioned abroad. Mr. REMINGTON also stated that instead of having special facilities given him by the Government of the United States, he had been questioned, impeded and baffled in his transactions in arms in a manner and to an extent far beyond anything to which he had ever known a citizen of any other country to be subjected, and that when his character was questioned abroad, and he applied to the officials of the War Department for a letter certifying to facts which appeared on their records, they declined to give it on the ground that they did not want to be dragged into matters of that kind, and would only consent to certify that he had had large transactions in arms with the Department, and had been found trustworthy. Mr. SCHURZ thought it very odd that a gentleman who wanted a certificate of good character to enable him to get into good society abroad should apply for it at the War Department. [Laughter.] Mr. CONKLING—Did the Senator understand me to say that Mr. REMINGTON wanted a certificate to introduce him into good society abroad? Mr. SCHURZ—No, Sir. So far from supposing that he wanted that certificate to get him into good society, I believe that he wanted it to help him in settling his accounts with the French Government. Whether, it was an act of very questionable propriety for the Chief of Ordnance or the Secretary of War to give a certificate of character to a man who had been virtually turned out of the Department as a French agent a short time before. Mr. CONKLING said the certificate was given this winter, long after the end of the war. Mr. SCHURZ—Yes, but it was given after the first trial of M. PLACE had ended, and after Mr. REMINGTON had got into difficulties with the French Government about his army contracts. Mr. SCHURZ then spoke of the difference between the amount paid by the French for the arms, and that received by the War Department, and asked where the rest of the money had gone. After the indorsement of Mr. REMINGTON, by such high authorities, it would not do to suppose that he had stained his hands with it. He (Mr. SCHURZ) did not know where it had gone, but the investigation would probably show. It was no use to attempt to ignore the suspicions excited on this subject at home and abroad. The honor of the nation required that the matter should be investigated. A year ago he had this subject forced upon his attention by letters, resolutions and remonstrances from German-born citizens, who believed that the Government was selling arms to the French, and urged him to attack the Government for it in the Senate, but he had forborne to do so because he did not think it prudent to introduce the subject at that time, lest the friends of the Administration might be driven to justify its action and might thereby disturb the good feeling existing between it and the German element. He had, however, done all he could in private to stop the sales. The Secretary of War, when applied to, said that the Government had a right to sell arms to American citizens, and that he did know that the arms went into the hands of the French, and that he saw no reason to stop the sales. For a while the sales were said to have been suspended, but after the November election in that year they were resumed, if, indeed, they had been stopped. The Secretary of State then promised to interfere, and finally they were stopped. When he (SCHURZ) saw the officials of the United States thus persisting in a course so dangerous, and so likely to compromise the country with foreign Powers, his suspicions were awakened, and as their conduct could not be explained upon any ground of reason or patriotism, he was driven to the suspicion that there was a job at the bottom of it. He did not, however, suspect the Secretary of War. He believed him to be rather a victim than a co-actor. In conclusion, Mr. SCHURZ said the people had an impression that somewhere in this country there existed a military Ring which was exerting a corrupt and dangerous influence on the Administration, and if the proposed investigation should either show that this impression was unfounded, or should discover the guilty and bring them to punishment, it would render a very important service to the best interests of the American people. Without reaching a vote, the Senate, at 4½ o'clock, went into Executive session, and soon after adjourned.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

The bill reported yesterday for the erection of a Government building at Quincy, Ill., came up in the morning hour, and on a vote by yeas and nays was passed. Mr. WILLARD, from the Committee on the Reorganization of the Civil Service, reported a bill to regulate the employment and compensation of clerks to the Committees of the House. After some discussion the bill went over, without action, till the morning hour of Tuesday, and the House, at 1½ o'clock, went into Committee of the Whole, Mr. BLAIR, of Michigan, in the chair, on the Naval Appropriation bill.

NAVAL APPROPRIATION.

Mr. SLOCUM moved to strike out the item for the Brooklyn Naval Hospital, but withdrew it after debate, saying that he had accomplished his object, which was to call attention to the subject. Mr. HOLMAN's motion to strike out the item for a naval establishment at Mount City, Ill., was rejected. Mr. L. MYERS offered an amendment for supplying sailors with clothing at the expense of the Government, and with drew it, saying that he would embody it in a bill which he would introduce. Mr. HALE moved to add a new section to the bill, directing the Secretary of the Navy to sell at public sale after advertisement such vessels and materials as are not suitable or capable of profitable use, repair, or fitting out. Mr. WOOD said vessels should not be sold except after condemnation by a board of naval officers. Mr. MAYNARD suggested that exception should be made of such historical vessels as the Constitution, the Macedonian, the Kearsarge, and the yacht America, which should be always maintained by the Government. Mr. HALE objected to Mr. WOOD's suggestion, as taking the responsibility from the Secretary of the Navy, and putting it on a board of naval officers. The discussion was continued by Messrs. GARFIELD and SWANN, who stated that in case of war, which was imminent now, there were not six vessels in the navy that could be relied on. Mr. MAYNARD's amendment, Mr. DICKEY suggested, would include all the vessels that were eminently distinguished for their incapacity. [Laughter.] Mr. BUTLER said we had had some experience of that kind. They had sold for $33,000 the vessel known as the Hornet, and it had cost the Government $150,000 to watch her. Some of those vessels might be converted into privateers against other Governments, and put this country in the same predicament as England with the Alabama and other privateers. He would have useless vessels broken up and sold, but he would not have them sold as ships. Mr. MAYNARD's amendment was rejected, and Mr. HALE's was adopted. The Committee rose, the bill was passed, and the House adjourned.

Jersey City's Finances.

The purchase by the Jersey City Board of Public Works of the Harrison estate, at a cost of $316,000, for the erection of public buildings, has excited a most unexpected opposition on the part of numbers of the citizens. It is claimed that the city is now too heavily burdened with debt, that the expenditures for the last year have been extravagant and wasteful, that the purchase is not suitable for the purpose and is a speculation, and that, as the proposed buildings are not immediately needed nor to be immediately erected, the expenditure is not warrantable at a time when the city is laboring under heavy financial embarrassment. Petitions are being extensively circulated throughout the city calling upon the Board to reconsider, and upon the Mayor to veto their action.

THE STATE LEGISLATURE.

SENATE....ALBANY, Thursday, Feb. 15.

In the Senate, today, the Controller reported that there were seventy-nine officers of the last Senate whose average pay was about $700 each.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Bills were introduced: To annul the charter of the Central Underground Railroad Company, and to provide for the better administration of the estates of deceased persons.

REPORTED.

The following bills were reported: To reapportion the United States deposit fund among different academies; to repeal the act to authorize New-York City to take certain lakes in Putnam and Westchester Counties; to provide for the formation of free public libraries.

PASSED.

The bills passed were those to amend the charter of the American Bible Society; to amend the charter of the National Trust Company, and the House resolution for a recess, amended so as to fix Saturday as the time for adjournment, was concurred in, and the Senate adjourned.

ASSEMBLY.

Mr. TWOMBLY introduced a bill to amend the charter of the New-York City Central Underground Railroad:

In addition to the powers already granted to the Company, they may construct subways, and operate therein a railway, with two or more tracks, for passengers and freight, the carriages to be propelled by steam. The Company is allowed three years to complete the road to connect with the Harlem Railroad, and two years thereafter to connect with the Harlem River. They are also empowered to construct therein a western branch, on the surface ground, or on a viaduct or any elevated bed, at any place above Ninety-sixth-street.

NEW-YORK CITY CHARTER.

The House went into Committee on the New-York City Charter. The question pending was the motion by IRA D. BROWN:

SECTION 92. It shall not be lawful to make any appropriation of the public money or property, or loan the credit of the City of New-York in aid of any private, sectarian, or denominational school that is not under the control and management of the Board of Public Instruction, and subject to the general laws of the State relating to public schools.

Mr. HAWKINS said that great good was done in New-York by providing schools in which the poorer class of children could be educated, and they should be supported. He hoped the motion to amend would not prevail. Mr. ALVORD was opposed in toto to diverting a single cent from the Treasury to support district and separate schools. He was for prohibiting the taxing of a single dollar to be used for any other than purely Municipal purposes. Mr. SMITH hoped that before this Legislature adjourned a general law would be passed bringing all the State under some fixed and well-defined rule, by which the people may be taxed for charitable and educational purposes. He therefore suggested passing over this question to let Mr. ALVORD bring in a general act making the provision he referred to. Mr. ALVORD was satisfied that no general law on the subject could be framed which would not be liable to be broken in by every recurring Legislature. The only way to accomplish the matter generally would be through an amendment to the Constitution, and that would take three years. Hence he was in favor of inserting it in this act. Mr. SMYTH—Would not a general law apply to New-York just as well as this act? Mr. ALVORD—Certainly, but as there is danger of our not getting a general law at this session, and as we now have this act before us, I am in favor of inserting it here and now. Mr. BARR said he was in favor of the amendment. Mr. D. B. HILL called attention to what had been denominated an infamous Charity bill of 1871, showing that a number of the appropriations were to Protestant institutions, for all of which Mr. ALVORD had voted. Mr. SMYTH—What is the proportion of these appropriations? D. B. HILL—To the Catholics the larger number were made, of course, for the reason that the Catholics have much the largest number of poor, and consequently of these institutions. He objected to this amendment for the reason that it made a distinction against the City of New-York, which has so large a number of these institutions, and that in the City of Syracuse and other cities without any such prohibition. Mr. ALVORD explained that he was obliged to vote for the Charity bill last year to save appropriations to institutions of similar character in his own locality. He did wrong. He would never repeat that vote. IRA D. BROWN—This prohibition was against appropriations to schools or charitable institutions which were not under the control of sectarian influence. Appropriations had been inserted in the bill after the Legislature adjourned; also, that the bill was locked up in the desk of WM. M. TWEED, and no reporter could get access to it. Mr. JACOBS—That bill was locked up in my desk on the last day of the session. Mr. STRAHAN stated that last year there was an application for an appropriation to an institution in Newburg, which he knew to be unworthy, not for the reason that it was Catholic, but because it has no inmates. He defeated the proposition, but to his surprise, after the adjournment, he found it in the bill. As the gentleman from Kings (Mr. JACOBS) had said he had that bill locked up in his desk, he would ask him how that was done. Mr. JACOBS could not get the floor to reply. Mr. IRA D. BROWN finished his remarks. Mr. PELL moved to change the word "sectarian," in Mr. BROWN's amendment, to "denominational," which Mr. BROWN accepted, and then the amendment was adopted. Mr. STRAHAN moved to insert in section 101 a provision to pay for printing or publishing a paper called the City Record. Mr. TWOMBLY insisted that it would be an outrage to require notices to be published in any such paper. It will be simply continuing the Transcript swindle. Mr. STRAHAN said this paper was already provided for in the bill, and his amendment was only to perfect the bill. Mr. HUSTED believed the true place to publish these notices was in the existing daily papers, and moved to amend by striking out all reference to the City Record and substituting therefor the words "two newspapers having the largest circulation in the City," making the proposals for the same. Mr. JUDD explained that the bill now required that the City establish this paper, and thus divest the business of the jobbery it has been subjected to. Without disposing of the question, on motion of Mr. ALVORD, who said the House could do some general business before adjournment, the Committee rose and reported progress, when the bill was made the special order for this evening

GENERAL BUSINESS.

The Senate amendment to the resolution for a recess providing for an adjournment from Saturday instead of Friday till the 26th, was carried. Mr. MOULTON presented the memorial of citizens of New-York asking relief from obstructions in railroads in the Fourth-avenue. Mr. JUDD presented petitions in favor of the repeal of the Erie Classification act; also, of the citizens of Staten Island to be embraced in the Metropolitan Police act.

BILLS REPORTED.

Mr. ALVORD report a bill from the Ways and Means Committee, the Annual Appropriation bill, and submitted the testimony taken in the New Capitol investigation, with a resolution that the Committee be discharged from the further consideration of the matter. Mr. JACOBS gave notice that he would, at an early day, submit a minority report upon matters which a majority of the Committee would not investigate. Mr. ALVORD stated that the Committee made the investigation comply strictly with the resolution which called for it. Mr. JACOBS stated that, so far as the Commissioners and Superintendent were concerned, he believed they had discharged their duties honestly; but he wished to make a report upon other matters. Mr. ALVORD stated that the matter of the Eight-hour law was not submitted to the Committee, and they, therefore, did not act upon it. Mr. JACOBS asked till to-morrow morning to make a minority report, and that the question on the resolution be postponed till then, which was agreed to. Mr. ALBERGER, from the Committee investigating the affairs of the Pacific Mail, reported the charges proven, and the complaint made for the purpose of influencing the stock in monetary circles, and condemn the authors of the complaint, who have used legislation for purely speculative purposes. Mr. LYNDS reported a bill to appoint Commissioners to make a survey of Richmond County, and certain maps therefrom, and report a plan for laying out Staten Island and for securing a water supply.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Among the bills introduced was one to provide for calling a convention to revise the charter of Brooklyn, and another regulating the fees of the marshals of New-York, and to protect the legal owners of lost or stolen bonds. Mr. ALBERGER moved that the Committee of Commerce investigating the quarantine affairs be authorized to employ counsel and a stenographer. Mr. ALVORD opposed it and it was referred to the Judiciary Committee. A recess was then taken.

EVENING SESSION.

The House, in Committee, resumed the consideration of the New-York Charter bill. The question pending was on Mr. HUSTED's motion providing for the publication of official notices. Mr. JUDD said provision was made for publishing the proceedings of the Common Council in a paper to be called the City Record, and a synopsis furnished to the daily papers. He referred to the immense amount of money paid out for this work, amounting in two years to $1,100,000, and though this patronage should not have had any influence on the Press though subsidized by this patronage. Their charter contained no provisions which, and in any extravagance in this direction, and he hoped the section would be allowed to remain as it is. Mr. HUSTED was opposed to the establishment of any paper to be carried on by the City. He did not believe the Press of New-York would be subsidized by this patronage. Mr. ALBERGER defended the proposition, and hoped the House would go on with this charter as it was in the main. Mr. ALVORD said the Legislature of the State of New-York had waited five weeks for this charter, and he, for one, would not go for it with eyes shut and closed lips. Mr. HUSTED moved to amend his amendment so as to make it three daily papers, to include the Independent Press, which he was certain could not be subsidized. Mr. TILDEN did not understand that the authors of this bill intended any newspaper edited like a newspaper, but simply a publication which will contain briefly the proceedings of the Common Council. He was quite sure the authors of the bill did not intend to do anything which would continue the abuses which had been suffered. The motion, as amended, was adopted. Mr. ALVORD moved to strike out of section 102 the provision that all advertisements of Departments shall be printed in the City Record. If it was intended to make this paper a mere record of the Common Council proceedings, he wanted to confine it to that service. Mr. HAWKINS said it was intended to make the City Record the record of the doings of all the other Departments of the City, as well as the Common Council. Mr. TWOMBLY, in stating the extravagant charges for printing, said the foreman of the Grand Jury had told him that one of the witnesses before the jury was asked whether work of this kind, for which enormous prices had been charged, was worth $10,000, $5,000, or $1,000, and responded in the negative, but finally said it was worth about $25. Mr. D. B. HILL asked the gentleman (Mr. TWOMBLY) if he did not know that his informant, in giving him that information was guilty of a misdemeanor? Mr. TWOMBLY said that was so, but nevertheless, he gave him the information. These things were known generally. Mr. ALVORD's amendment was adopted. Mr. TILDEN moved to add to the last section a clause, the effect of which was to leave in existence the acts to punish bribery and fraud in office. Adopted. Amendments generally were then announced to be in order, and Mr. ALVORD stated that as the House had held a long session today, and as it would be impossible to get through the bill tonight, he would move to report progress and make the bill the special order for to-morrow morning, which was carried.

THE NEW CAPITOL.

Mr. JACOBS, from the minority of the Committee of Ways and Means to whom was referred the charges against the Commissioners of the new Capitol stated that they agree with the majority of the Committee that the charges of corruption, &c., were not sustained, but say that all the difficulty between the working men and Commissioners had arisen from the fact that the Eight-hour law had not been enforced. The report concludes with a resolution that the Eight-hour law ought to be repealed or enforced.

The House then, at 9½ o'clock, adjourned.

Reform at Washington Market—Duties of the Clerks.

Col. DEVOE, the Superintendent of Markets, has issued an order defining the duties of clerks and assistants in Washington Market, with a view to doing away with the abuses which have been so long complained of. The clerks must be on duty by 4 A. M. At 7½ they will be relieved by the deputy clerk, for breakfast, and must return by 8 A. M. The deputy and assistant clerk will leave for dinner at 12½ and return at 2, when the clerks will be relieved from duty, except that the clerk of West Washington Market must remain all day on Fridays and the clerk of Washington Market on Saturdays. No excuse for absence will be received, except sickness. The assistant and deputy clerk must remain all day, or, if necessary, until the market is cleansed. The clerks must examine all articles brought into the markets, and if any unwholesome or stale meat or fish is found, it must be seized at once, and the salesman must be suspended. If any salesmen or women practice any deceit, such as representing their mutton as lamb, strong butter as sweet, &c., they must be fined or suspended.

The Annual Masquerade Ball of the German Liederkranz.

The grand annual fancy dress and masquerade ball of the German Liederkranz Society came off, last evening, at the Academy of Music, with a success even more decided and brilliant than characterized any similar event of former years. The chief feature of the night was the march and procession, which was more than usually unique. Shortly after 11 o'clock the curtain on the stage was withdrawn, and revealed a scene of splendor. The stage was enveloped in one sheet of calcium lights, interspersed with artistic jets and fountains bearing the words "Liederkranz, 1872," together with German and American national mottoes. First came the master of ceremonies, Reynard, followed closely by the musicians as rabbits, and immediately came dogs, grinning, chattering monkeys, the sovereign of the brute creation, hyenas, wolves, panthers, oxen, asses, forming a curious cavalcade of singular grotesqueness of design. "The Tammany Tiger," was represented as caught in his own ring, and this personation, which was followed closely by admirable and laughable caricatures of HALL and TWEED, such as NAST himself might have envied, provoked immense merriment, and for the moment seemed to infuse a serious element into the affair.

The procession finished, dancing commenced, and was continued with unabated enthusiasm until a late hour in the morning. Among those present were Baron Von Schloetzer, German Ambassador; Hon. Oswald Ottendorfer, Mr. Herman Uhl, Deputy Sheriff Mosheim, Major L. B. Rader, of the Seventh Regiment; John Hoey, W. B. Dinsmore, William Steinway, Dr. Damrosch, Surrogate Hutchings, Recorder Hackett and many others.

The music was admirable, and was under the direction of Mr. DIETZ and Mr. BERNSTEIN.
